

Hunger Parade Group Starting To Return Home

Leaders in London Disorders are Brought Into Court

OVER 40 INJURED

41 Arrests Made During Disturbances, Report

London.—(P)—Balked last night in their third attempt to enforce their demands by violence, the unemployed "hunger marchers" who straggled into London last week turned homeward today.

W. A. L. Hamington, the Communist agent who organized the march of the idle from Scotland, Wales and the industrial centers of England, was in jail. His associates who precipitated a riot in Parliament square last night also were in the hands of the police.

So this morning 30 ragged men who had trudged with the others through the rain last week climbed aboard a "charabanc" and started back for Brighton, whence they came. Other contingents prepared to go back home before the end of the day.

Twenty-seven men, arrested after last night's disorders, were arraigned this morning. Two were sentenced to six months at hard labor, several were fined small amounts, and others cases were held "for a week."

John Gilmour, home secretary, gave a casualty list of the past several days in reporting on the disturbances to the house of commons.

Forty-one arrests were made, 12 policemen were injured more seriously, and 32 unemployed were hurt, some of them hospital cases.

Crowds hampered police that it had been necessary to clear the streets of their clubs. That necessity might not have arisen, he said, if the London crowds, despite appeals by the authorities, had not hampered the police by thronging the areas where the most serious disorders occurred.

In the future, he said, the government will consider any means necessary to prevent a recurrence of the disturbances.

The disorders began at dusk in the heart of the capital and quiet was not completely restored until nearly midnight. Scores suffered minor bruises.

This was brought to a climax a series of disturbances that began, as last night, in a march on parliament to protest against the government's application of the dole system.

The first disorder came Oct. 21 when parliament reconvened. The national "hunger army" arrived in London last Thursday was the signal for the second and the third came Sunday night in Trafalgar square when a rush was made for Buckingham palace, the residence of the king.

All told, the seriously injured in these four outbursts have numbered more than 100, including 15 taken to hospitals last night and released after treatment.

Despite the arrest yesterday of W. A. L. Hamington, the Communist leader of the "hunger army," who was to have led a deputation toward parliament, the jobless marshaled their strength last night as they had threatened.

Series of battles

And, likewise, the police responded with strong arm methods. The police won in a series of battles that raged along Victoria embankment, Pall Mall, the Strand, Trafalgar square, and Whitehall.

The police got the jump on the demonstrators when the jobless drifted toward Parliament square in small groups from many directions.

Hoover Rounds Out His Final Plans in Race

VISITS TWIN CITIES

Expected to Make Stops Enroute Westward On His Tour

Washington.—(P)—Retiring again to his quiet study in the White House, President Hoover today concentrated on preparation for his departure tomorrow on a final campaign tour that may carry him to his home in California for Election day.

Four major campaign speeches already have been mapped out for the chief executive in this last drive for reelection. He will leave the capital tomorrow afternoon on an itinerary that will carry him to St. Paul for a speech Saturday night.

Beyond that his plans today were still in a formative state, but arrangements had been made for him to dash from the Twin Cities to his home in Palo Alto in time to vote, "if he desires."

Definite arrangements have been made for the chief executive to speak in Springfield, Ill., Friday afternoon, and St. Louis Friday night. Plans also were being made for stops along the way to the Twin Cities Saturday. In addition Mr. Hoover is to make an appeal over a nationwide radio set-up on Election day from wherever he may be.

Before turning to his campaign speeches, the president today shaped an address he will deliver by telephone to the people of his home state tonight in celebration of "California day."

Some of his friends believed he might announce his plans for Election day in that talk.

George Z. Medalle, Republican candidate for the senate from New York, arrived in the capital today for lunch with the president at the White House. The chief executive planned to return to work on his speeches after the engagement.

El Paso, Texas.—(P)—A jury in United States District court here today was to decide whether Warren C. Spurgin, fugitive Chicago banker, is legally dead or alive.

His daughter, Mrs. Vivian Tilton, is suing to collect a $5,000 life insurance policy on the life of her father, issued by the Aetna Life Insurance company.

The banker disappeared from Chicago the night of July 15, 1921, and was later seen in Mexico.

Mrs. Tilton on the witness stand shook her head when Attorney W. C. Roche asked her if she knew of an affair her father assertedly had with a woman known as "Blonde Ethel."

Father never gave his address in a letter we received from him postmarked Chihuahua City," Mrs. Tilton said. "We followed every possible clue, made inquiries and hired a legal firm to assist in the search."

"On the night of July 15, 1921, father told mother and me that he was in financial difficulties, and was going to leave Chicago, never to return."

"He told me goodbye. That was the last time I saw him."

"He never explained the nature of the difficulties."

"Mother and I were dependent on him for support. He gave us $750 before leaving. He sent $1,000 in the letter from Chihuahua City."

Mrs. Tilton testified she and her mother left Chicago for Detroit several days after Spurgin disappeared.

"We left to escape publicity," she said. "We wanted to be alone. We did not register under assumed names at a Detroit apartment house."

"When we returned to Chicago, we were taken into custody and questioned by prosecuting attorneys from 8 p. m. to 4:30 a. m. Next day we were kept under guard in a hotel."

Mrs. Tilton testified she and her husband came to El Paso in February, 1931, in the hope of learning the whereabouts of her father.

YOUTH FALLS TO DEATH In Shaft of Elevator

Omaha.—(P)—A gay studio party ended tragically shortly after 3 o'clock a. m. today when Tawny J. Cleveland, 21, Omaha, photographer, fell 22 feet to his death while attempting to rescue a girl companion who had previously fallen to the bottom of an elevator shaft in a downtown building.

Miss Emma Stewart, 17, his companion, received only minor injuries and was released after being given emergency treatment.

Astronomers Look In Vain for Comet Discovered in 1866

Chicago.—(P)—Astronomers have sought in vain the last few nights for the lost Tempel's comet, due to reappear this year.

The comet, Dr. W. D. MacMillan, professor of astronomy at the University of Chicago, explained, was first seen in 1866. Its orbit was calculated to be 33 years, so in 1899 big telescopes scanned the skies but Tempel's comet was nowhere to be seen.

Now that another 33 years has rolled around astronomers have renewed their search. However, Dr. Otto Strauve, director of the Yerkes observatory, at Williams Bay, Wis., admitted today it was very improbable the comet would be found.

"There is no definite place to look and it is very uncertain that Tempel's comet still exists," he lamented.

"We do know, however, that it will produce a shower of shooting stars, which is expected to be seen sometime this month."

Dr. MacMillan said it was probable the comet had disintegrated.

"Jafsie" Fails to Identify Suspect in Lindbergh Case

Jewel Thief Not Man Who Took $50,000 Near Bronx Cemetery

Newark, N. J.—(P)—Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case, visited police headquarters today and failed to identify Arthur Barry, jewel thief, captured in Sussex-co 10 days ago.

Barry, who has been held here on the possibility that he might have had some connection with the kidnaping, was placed in a lineup with several detectives. Dr. Condon looked at the men and said he knew none of them.

When Barry was pointed out to him he said he had never seen him before.

"The man I gave the money to," said Dr. Condon, referring to the payment of the $50,000 ransom money outside a Bronx cemetery, "was much taller."

Barry's hands, "those are not his hands," he said. "I saw his hands as I handed him the money, and received a receipt which is now in Colonel Lindbergh's possession."

Barry looked relieved. "Dr. Condon," he said, "I want to thank you. You could have dropped a big lemon into my lap right now, and you didn't. I want to repeat again that I know nothing of the Lindbergh case."

The two men chatted for a few minutes. Dr. Condon asked Barry if he had a mother and if he ever thought of her. And just about this time Mrs. Anna Blake Barry, wife of the prisoner, walked in. She, too, spoke briefly with Dr. Condon, who waited a few minutes and then left.

More Stock Is Issued By Grain Corporation

Chicago.—(P)—The Farmers' National Grain corporation, government-sponsored grain cooperative, celebrating its third anniversary, today announced the issuance of 5,011 additional shares of stock to its members.

The membership of the corporation consists of the 28 principal state and regional cooperative organizations of the country. Its formation Oct. 29, 1929, was made possible through loans from the federal farm board, totalling some $35,000,000, but since reduced to about $15,000,000.

C. E. Huff of Salina, Kas., the president, said that the stock issued today brings to a total of 12,000 shares the holdings of members which at par value of $100 each represents a total stock investment of nearly a million and a quarter dollars. Surplus funds total approximately the same, he added, and furthermore "adequate reserves" have been set up.

Stores Ready For Opening of Fall Festival

Merchants Look for Record Breaking Crowds Next Three Days

LIFT PARKING LAWS

No Restrictions on Car Parking in Shopping Districts

Appleton stores and shops today are being converted into a carnival of fashion as merchants make their final preparations for the annual Fall Festival which opens tomorrow and continues until Saturday night.

With the promise of free transportation during shopping hours to Appleton shoppers, and removal of restrictions on downtown car parking during the three days, merchants are expecting the largest crowds in the city since the bi-centennial celebration last spring.

Enormous interest has been created throughout the entire Appleton shopping era in this merchandising event and merchants are prepared for tremendous crowds in their stores.

Messages of the merchants are being sent into more than 22,000 homes today by the Fall Festival edition of the Appleton Post-Crescent. This 40-page newspaper, filled with style and merchandising news, is a revelation of the extent to which merchants have gone to prepare for this event.

Every effort has been made to assure comfort and convenience of the shopping public. Restaurants are cooperating by offering special prices and specially prepared menus for the shopping public. Free transportation has been provided on L. S. lines through the use of coupons printed in the Post-Crescent, comfort rooms have been established at leading hotels and shoppers will find salespeople generally seeking ways and means to make them comfortable.

Special merchandising opportunities are being offered by the cooperating merchants to all those who make purchases or make payments on past accounts.

Coupons for bus transportation will be honored for a ride to the downtown district from 8:30 to 10:30 in the morning, and from 1 to 3 o'clock in the afternoon on each day of the festival.

Almost every merchant in the city is cooperating in this event, and those taking part can be identified by the specially prepared Fall Festival window banners.

Papers are Drafted for Martin Insull's Return

Washington.—(P)—Extradition papers for the return of Martin Insull, Chicago utilities magnate, from Canada for trial on charges of larceny and embezzlement were being prepared today at the state department.

John P. Hampton, assistant state's attorney of Illinois, conferred with department officials as a preliminary to signature of the extradition documents.

Prosperity Is Found By Labrador Eskimos

Gold Strike Encourages Miners in Washington

Ellensburg, Wash.—(P)—Virtually abandoned since the more riotous days of the gay, gold mining nineties, diggings in the Swauk area are being worked again by miners from all over the west, encouraged by a find of $10,000 in one small pocket.

Two weeks ago Ollie Jordin purchased a claim from Roy Milne. A week later Jordin, working with one helper, struck a rich pocket two feet long and 18 inches wide. It was three feet below the point where Milne quit digging.

Since that time, Jordin has turned over 264 pounds of pure gold to a bank at Cle Elum to be shipped to the government assay office.

The metal is heavy, yellow gold and so pure it will not need refining. In addition Jordin has placed in vaults some fruit jars filled with gold, not quite so pure, and 300 pounds of rock, containing heavy gold.

The value of the amount taken out was estimated by jewelers and bankers at over $10,000. It was found in a mud ocure seam, against a rock dyke, on the side of Flag mountain.

Jordin, who has taken off only the top part of the pocket, has engaged armed guards to protect his property day and night.

The heavy wire texture of the Jordin find is considered indicative it is not a rock deposit, but that it had, while hot, seeped from an original vein, probably on the same mountain.

Michigan Deputy and Bank Robber Suspect Killed in Gun Battle

Deny Using Pressure to Compel Vote for Hoover

Outagamie county political leaders and employers this morning emphatically denied rumors emanating from Milwaukee that employers in the Fox river valley are coercing their employees to vote for Hoover for president.

The rumors, as reported in a Milwaukee newspaper this morning, are that employers are re-hiring men laid off months ago and telling them that their jobs will be gone after Nov. 8 if Roosevelt is elected.

The Milwaukee paper also declares that political leaders in the county have talked to employees concerning the threats and that they have taken up the matter with F. Ryan Duffy, Democratic candidate for United States senator. Employees in paper mills are quoted as saying:

"We were told the jobs would be good until Nov. 9 and that from then on all depended on whether Hoover or Roosevelt was victor."

R. O. Schmidt, chairman of the county Republican committee, and Stephen D. Balliet, county Democratic chairman, agreed they had never heard the rumors and they had no ideas where the stories started.

Denials Emphatic

Paper mill heads were even more emphatic in their denial of such a plan. They denounced the rumors as ridiculous and all agreed that it wasn't being done in their particular plants.

F. J. Sensenbrenner, president of the Kimberly Clark corporation, declared that the rumors were ridiculous and absolutely no truth in the rumor, so far as it applied to his company was concerned. He said his company was absolutely not engaged in such a campaign and that he knew nothing about such a campaign in any other plant.

C. R. Seaborn, general superintendent of the Thilman Pulp and Paper company at Kaukauna, also his company. He said his company now has less men at work than it did a year ago, despite the fact that its output was greater.

L. L. Aisted, president of the Combined Locks Paper company, denied knowledge of such a campaign, either in his plant or in the plants of any other companies. He said he was so closely connected with the industry that he was sure he would know if such a campaign was in effect.

A. F. Kleitman, secretary of the Fox River Paper company, was emphatic in his denial that such a campaign was in effect or that there was any truth in the rumors.

Woman, Two Men Nabbed in Slaying Of Paris Jeweler

New York.—(P)—A night life mystery—the puzzling death of a rich jeweler from Paris—was declared solved today with the arrest for homicide of a blonde woman and two male associates in what police called a "hit and run" speakeasy venture.

Achille Mirner, vivacious Frenchman, here on a business trip, wondered what Broadway affair, midnight, was like, last Saturday, with about $1,800 wadded in his pocket, he went forth to find out. A few hours later he staggered back to his hotel, moaning and bearing evidence of a beating Monday he died of his injuries.

Detectives, linking the beating with the apparent loss of his $1,800, learned he had been drinking in a "hit and run speakeasy"—the sort of resort that fleeced all customers, then moves to new location a jump ahead of the police.

Last night an attractive, 22-year-old blonde, who said she was Mrs. Eleanor Thompson and an enter-tainer, was arrested. With her were taken Lawrence "Salty" Ganz and Herman Newbury.

After hours of questioning, the detectives said they learned that Mirner and a friend, Jerome Bernheim, diamond dealer, arrived early Sunday at the speakeasy, which had been opened Saturday, mostly on Mrs. Thompson's capital. The two customers stayed two hours, drinking whisky, then were presented a bill for $157.

Mirner paid. As he and his companion started out, Mrs. Thompson insisted Bernheim to her apartment. They departed, leaving Mirner with Ganz, Newbury and several others.

Bernheim said he and the woman rode a few blocks, then she stopped the cab and said: "Just go in that house. You're a good fellow, so I'll pay the bill." Bernheim, entering the house, turned around just in time to see the taxi dash away, with Mrs. Thompson inside.

Mrs. Thompson returned the speakeasy, she said, to find the jeweler on the floor bleeding. She did not know how he was injured, she insisted. Her male companions also protested innocence, but all three were booked for homicide.

The police said the arrest of Mrs. Thompson probably saved her from being taken for a ride "because she knew too much." They declared Ganz had been overheard telephoning to some other man, saying:

"Well, what do we care? Dead men tell no tales. We've got the blonde and she seen it all, so we'll get rid of her."

Robber Captured as He Flees From Police

Chicago.—(P)—A youth giving the name Harold Furley, 22, suspected by police to be the son of wealthy parents in Regina, Sask., was captured early today as he tried to escape in a taxicab after robbing a loop restaurant.

He refused to name his parents, but said they were wealthy and that he himself was a former college student. He admitted having purchased a toy pistol at Racine, Wis., yesterday and said he stole an automatic pistol while the salesgirl was not looking.

Another Officer Critically Wounded in Fight on Farm

3 PERSONS NABBED Occupants of Home Open Fire as Officials Appear

Lapeer, Mich.—(P)—A deputy sheriff was shot and killed, a bandit suspect apparently shot and killed himself, and another officer was shot and seriously wounded shortly after noon today in a gun battle which began when officers went to a farmhouse north of here to question the occupants about a bank robbery last July. Three persons were arrested.

Deputy Sheriff Harvey Tedder of Oakland-co was slain as he approached the door of the farmhouse to question the occupants. Benjamin Dillon, 20, apparently wounded himself fatally after he had slain Tedder and wounded Undersheriff Frank Greenan, also of Oakland-co, in the arm and side. The officials said Dillon, before he died, admitted participation in the robbery.

Scott Dillon, 26, a brother of the slain man, was arrested, as were the mother, Mrs. Claudia Dillon, 52, and Miss Marian Halliday, 17, who had been living at the farm house.

Detectives said the two officers had received a tip that the bandits who last July looted the State Bank of Clarkston, Mich., of between $4,000 and $5,000 were in hiding at the farmhouse. Arriving there, they said a gun battle broke out almost immediately.

At the Lapeer hospital, officials said Undersheriff Greenan had not been brought to the hospital for treatment, but was remaining at the scene of the battle.

She was in a dangerous position. The salvage steamer Jason was hurrying to her aid, but the trip probably will take two days.

Renewal of Barber War Seen in Madison

Madison.—(P)—A rock was hurled through a barber shop window here early today in what police say is a renewal of a fight against cut-rate barber establishments. Less than a week ago a stone shattered the window of a shop operated by Albert Shipley. Early today the window of a shop owned by R. W. Thistle was broken. Thistle, a former Milwaukee barber, has operated here for six weeks.

Japs Menaced In North Half Of Manchuria

Chinese Wedge Aimed at Strategic City of Tsitsihar

Harbin, Manchuria.—(P) The Japanese military position in the northern half of Manchuria was menaced today by a Chinese wedge aimed from north and west at the strategic city of Tsitsihar.

The operation of the wedge was noted in Japanese military reports disclosing that two fierce battles had been fought about 100 miles north of Tsitsihar, and the Chinese forces already in control of northwestern Manchuria were massing troops along the western end of the Chinese Eastern railway.

The two battles were fought Sunday and Monday between strong Japanese reinforcements and Chinese irregulars whose presence in the Tsitsihar area had drawn the Japanese troops there.

The Japanese claimed victory in both engagements but at the cost of 33 killed and 44 wounded. They said the Chinese dead and injured numbered at least 1,000.

The danger in the situation lay in the fact that Manchukuo troops in the north had revolted to aid the Chinese, and that further rebellion in the Manchukuo ranks was occurring.

Complicating this thrust from the north was the threat from General Su Ping-Wen and his Chinese irregulars from the northwest, who for a month have been in control of the city of Manchuli against the Soviet border.

Garrison Menaced

General Su's chief lieutenant, Chang Tien-Chu, was extending this control today southeastward toward Tsitsihar along the Chinese Eastern railway. He continually harassed the Japanese garrison at Fushichang.

Immediate attention was directed to the north, however, where the newest revolt occurred.

The two battles were fought at Taihanchen and Laha near the Chinese-controlled branch railway out of Tsitsihar. The Japanese said the Chinese irregulars, including revolting Manchukuo troops, recently attacked these two isolated Japanese garrison points.

The Chinese divided their 8,000 troops evenly, and besieged the Japanese many days until the reinforcements arrived Sunday and Monday, the Japanese said.

The Chinese were aided by the remnants of General Ma Chan-Shan's army which held the Japanese of Tsitsihar so long in September, 1931. The Japanese announced they had slain General Ma recently. The Ma troops, however, have been considerably reinforced, and are armed with mortars and machine guns. Their base also lies against the Soviet border at Taiheio.

General Revolts

Just to the south of Taihanchen and Laha the Manchukuo general, Pi-Ping-Shan, has revolted with his garrison at Jaiichuan. His 5,000 troops were threatening to reinforce the irregulars and return to the attack. This move would threaten Koshaw, the largest of these branch railway towns, and the end of the line.

The Japanese were not only countering the military wedge with further troops, but were planning other strategic moves. One of them was an airplane expedition to the Soviet border in the Manchuli area in an effort to free Japanese hostages held in that city by General Su.

General Su, through the good offices of Soviet Russia, recently released half the 300 Japanese held in Manchuli.

The airplane expedition will stop at Machevskaya in Soviet Russia and negotiate the release of the remaining Japanese, and attempt to alter the attitude of the Chinese general toward Manchukuo.

The next lecture number, scheduled for Dec. 12, will feature the Ramos Mexican orchestra.

Kohler Assails Record of Rival As Madison Chief

Candidate Warns Against Over-Confidence in Gubernatorial Race

By the Associated Press

Former Gov. Walter J. Kohler, Republican nominee, carried his campaign for the governorship into the home of his Democratic opponent, Mayor A. G. Schmiedeman, at Madison last night.

Mr. Kohler prefaced a discussion of Schmiedeman's record as mayor with the warning that he and the entire Republican state ticket still face a difficult hurdle, and that over-confidence may result in their defeat.

"There is indication that a lethargy exists today as it existed two years ago," he said. "In the 1930 primary campaign, not once did a county chairman give me any intimation but that I would carry the county, yet I carried only seven of the 71 counties. I urge you to see that we pile up a tremendous vote at the polls next Tuesday."

The former governor again announced his endorsement of the Hoover-Curtis ticket and of the candidacy of John E. Chapple, nominee for United States senator. He also stressed the importance of electing Republican nominees for other state offices.

"If I am surrounded again by a group like that which surrounded me the last time I was governor, I'll take my medicine and fight back, but it isn't good for the state to have the state officers in opposition to the governor," he said.

"Back Room" Politics

The election of a Democratic governor would permit the professional politicians to wield the powers of the state government from the seclusion of a "back room," Mr. Kohler said.

"The Democratic candidate's record, as well as his political alliance with the ring whose financial policies were repudiated by the voters in the recent primary, is sufficient proof that costs would not be cut and the budget would not be balanced if he were governor."

Mr. Kohler said the city of Madison spent $253,379 more than it received last year, its bonded indebtedness has increased 33 per cent in six years, and a greater part of its tax burden has fallen on property owners year after year.

"With such a record it is no wonder that this new recruit has been welcomed as one of their own kind by the Madison ring whose present state administration built the 'roller coasters,' increased our taxes, drained the treasury and boosted the state's total net disbursements by $20,000,000, the largest total and the greatest increase in the state's history."

Points to Record

His record while governor was assured by Mr. Kohler as "sufficient assurance of the sort of business administration which may be expected of me." During his administration, he said, an accrued deficit of $3,500,000 was wiped out, the upward trend of state expenditures was checked, state trust funds were safeguarded, the civil service law was strengthened and a modern type of budget procedure was installed.

"If the citizens of Wisconsin expect to have their tax burdens kept within bounds and to get a full dollar's worth of service for every dollar they contribute to the state treasury," he said, "they must elect a governor who is not only in sympathy with budgeting and other sound business methods, but who understands them; a governor who believes that a state should live within its means; a governor who will pause in the building up of state activities and departments long enough to consider whether the people can afford them."

EX-RED BIRD HOME TO ROOST

Far from Washington's Anasotia flats and the muddy camp of Johnstown, Pa., W. W. Waters, former commander of the bonus army, is pictured here with his wife, basking in Miami's tropical sun, as he sits down to the task of writing the history of the bonus marcher's campaign and its rout from Washington.

DARK FEARS

In the peroration of his Indianapolis speech Mr. Hoover said that "the fundamental issue in this campaign, the decision that will fix the national direction for a hundred years to come, is whether we shall go on in fidelity to the American tradition or whether we shall turn to innovations, the spirit of which is disclosed to us by many sinister revelations and veiled promises." This is an interesting prophecy and it is a pity that the President did not explain it. For up to that point in the campaign nobody, I think, would have guessed that any issue had been raised by either candidate which was so fundamental that it could change the "national direction" for a hundred years.

The Republicans have made a severe and reasonably well-justified attack upon the record of the Democratic House under Mr. Garner's leadership. But if everything they have said is accepted at face value, both as to the badness of the Democrats and the goodness of the Administration, it is still puzzling to know what Mr. Hoover means by suggesting that there was infidelity to the American tradition and a sinister revelation of a purpose to pervert it. Was he referring to the debacle of the sales tax? Surely the sales tax is no tostone of the American tradition for as late as December the Administration was opposed to it. Was he referring to the soldiers' bonus? Hardly, I should suppose, for catering to the veterans' vote is only too unhappily a long established American political tradition that has proved to be not unprofitable to Mr. Hoover's own party. Was he referring to the Goldborough Bill? It is not likely, for this foolish and one-headed bill was supported by the Republicans in a ratio of 2 to 1. Was he referring to the Garner porkbarrel bill? Mr. Hoover's own sense of humor would prevent that, for the porkbarrel is as authentic in our tradition as ham and eggs.

What then are these "sinister revelations and veiled promises" that will determine our destiny for a hundred years? Can it be Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to negotiate reciprocal tariffs? Good, bad or indifferent, that proposal is no "innovation," for it was orthodox Republicanism in the days of William McKinley. Can it be Mr. Roosevelt's excessively timid and weasel-worded promises to reduce tariff rates? Nobody, not even Mr. Smoot, would call that an infidelity to the American tradition. It cannot be his farm program for whatever may be said of it, it is less of an innovation than what the Farm Board has actually done under the present Administration. It cannot be the Democratic proposal for a outright repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the immediate legalization of beer. What then is left of the issues discussed during the campaign?

There are left, obviously enough, the proposals by Mr. Roosevelt to bring public utilities and banking and speculation and various kinds of transportation under stricter public control. Can it be that these are the sinister revelations and veiled promises? A thoroughly frightened conservative might think so, but I hesitate to believe that Mr. Hoover does.

Yet it is in this region alone that Mr. Roosevelt has proposed anything which could be called an innovation affecting the institutional structure of the country, and if anything he has said is important enough to fix the national direction for any long period of time, it must be found here. For in other matters relating to the emergency, in his views on Federal finance, on the maintenance of a sound currency, and on relief, Mr. Roosevelt is indisputably orthodox. The only innovations he has ever hinted at are innovations looking toward an extension of public control over economic activities which are, like transportation, power, and banking, in the nature of public services.

If this is where the danger to American traditions comes in, then it should be said at once that these proposals are nothing but the resumption of a movement which began in the late Eighties, was inter-

Little Left To Talk About For Nominees

Economic Issues Bigger Than Any Candidate, Lawrence Declares

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

New York.—With one week to go, the two presidential nominees are about talked out.

Neither one presented any new idea in the speeches broadcast Monday night from New York and Boston. They both continue to accuse the other of everything from misfeasance to non-feasance. They promise a better world but the listeners are too confused by the all speech-making to take it too seriously.

Tactics and stage management have made the speeches and their setting seem as if the campaign managers were trying to win localities rather than regions. Thus Governor Roosevelt tried hard to win to his banner some of the disaffected Smith supporters in Massachusetts. His references to the man who was standard bearer four years ago were affectionate and pointed.

Mr. Hoover sought to give the conservative New Yorkers a bit of fear with reference to the group consisting of LaFollette, Norris, Hearst, and Huey Long, who, he said, are supporting the Democratic nominee so staunchly that they expect to have a voice in the administration of Governor Roosevelt if he attains the presidency.

Warning By Roosevelt?

This point is not new, but Mr. Hoover gave it emphasis in this section, where the alliance implies a radicalism that is not palatable to business. As for Governor Roosevelt at Boston, he struck a glancing but nevertheless important blow at the industrialists when he asked them what they would think of a political leader who took reprisals at them for their effort to intimidate their employees on the matter of voting. Whether this is to be taken as a threat or a warning that Mr. Roosevelt would consider it fair to try to get even with these industrialists if elected, is hard to say. Strange as it may seem, while the Governor was talking in New England, a list of contributions to both Republican and Democratic campaign funds was filed in Washington and it shows men of wealth and big industry putting up big sums of money, some to the Democratic and some to the Republican party.

Whether elected, big business and finance will have a finger in the pie. Presidential candidates usually know who contributes the big money and they feel a sense of appreciation which is inescapable. Corporations cannot under the law give money to campaigns, but corporation executives can do so personally and the list shows they are doing it. When the campaign committees receive the money, they use it to influence voters. That is what it is given for. And in this campaign most of the money is coming from business men or wealthy individuals not active in business. Their interests are far flung.

Many Different Groups

So if it is assumed by Mr. Hoover that the LaFollette and the Norris and the Huey Longs own Mr. Roosevelt, so might it be assumed that the conservatives will influence him if he is elected. Even Mr. Hearst, who rarely answers a contributor, gave $25,000 to the Roosevelt fund, along with John J. Raskob and Bernard M. Baruch, so it is apparent the Democratic nominee is going to have plenty of conservatives, progressives and radicals with a stake in his future policies.

All this is merely another way of saying that in political campaigns for the presidency nowadays ideas are simply fodder for the microphones, while behind the scenes money talks and exercises its restraints against radicalism or extravagance in appropriation for the conservatism that has favored it in the past.

The pledges of the candidates are developing a striking similarity. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hoover both think relief is a local problem and the federal government must be brought in only in an extremity. Both hope jobs will come to the unemployed.

Both favor self-liquidating projects and public works as far as

Home Town Sees Democratic Candidate as New Wisconsin Senator

(By the Associated Press)

F. Ryan Duffy, Democratic candidate for United States senator, was welcomed with a torchlight parade and mass meeting when he returned to his home in Fond du Lac last night after a strenuous campaign.

John P. McGalloway, former law partner of the senatorial nominee, presided at the rally in Armory E. and predicted the election of Duffy next Tuesday.

"We know and recommend Ryan Duffy to the state of Wisconsin," McGalloway said. "We look forward with joy and gladness to Nov. 8 when the voters will be asked to elect one of Fond du Lac's leading citizens will become a United States senator."

Harold Wilkie, Madison attorney and a LaFollette-Progressive leader, County Judge P. H. Martin, and J. G. Hargrove, Milwaukee attorney, joined in welcoming Duffy and predicting his election.

"I hope the voters of Wisconsin will forget partisan politics on Nov. 8 and see the real opportunity to elect an exceptional public servant," Wilkie said. "I do not believe that there is a man better qualified to represent Wisconsin than Ryan Duffy and I pledge to him my 100 per cent support."

Mayor A. G. Schmiedeman of Madison, Democratic nominee for practicable. Both promise in general terms to save the nation and each thinks the other unwarranted attacks. The American people are expected to umpire the dispute with their ballots, while millions of people are unaware of the disillusionment that must come when it becomes apparent after election that economic forces, not man any group of radicals, have the sway.

Helble Writes Articles About Jobless Grads

Sound Reading Program Advised by Appleton School Principal

The Unemployed High School Graduate, an article by Herbert H. Helble, principal of Appleton high school, appears in the November issue of the Journal of the National Education association. Reprints of the article will be furnished by the division of publications of the association to unemployed high school graduates who might profit by some of the ideas projected in the article.

Explaining the soundness of the back-to-the-farm movement, Mr. Helble suggests that many of the unemployed high school graduates work on farms, where they can at least live and be useful. He advises a reading program, through which the graduate can master most any subject, the volunteering of services as playground directors, which would relieve municipalities of the cost of playground direction and at the same time give the student a chance to develop his ability to handle people; and active participation in all community enterprises—Sunday school, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and other social works.

With the contention that writing is not an innate gift granted to only the few, Mr. Helble suggests that unemployed students try writing, and gives a number of pointers on possible avenues of publication.

The development of hobbies is another of his hints for the unemployed. As vocations he recommends bird study, research along local historical lines, zoology, botany, stamp and coin collecting, music, gardening, baseball, horse-shoe-pitching, and other inexpensive forms of entertainment.

Rather than remain idle, he urges the unemployed graduate to select a vocation which would interest him and volunteer to serve an internship in that line of business.

In conclusion the writer admonishes the student to keep his intellectual machinery from growing rusty. This, he points out, can be done by returning to the high school for postgraduate work, enrolling in extension courses, and by continued practice of the things learned in high school.

Badger Editor in Plea to Farmers To Back Hoover

"You Will Have to Gamble With Roosevelt," Bolles Declares

Chicago.—(P) Contrasting Republican and Democratic tariff policies, Stephen Bolles, Janesville, Wis., editor, said in a radio address here last night that the American dairy farmer faces a battle in next Tuesday's election to preserve the protection accorded him during the administration of President Hoover.

"Will the dairy farmer go along with President Hoover, who has helped him, or Roosevelt, who is wandering around trying to find what sort of words will get the most votes?" he asked.

"You have tested Hoover. He is for the farmer's tariff. You will have to gamble with Roosevelt."

Roosevelt proposes to make reciprocal tariff treaties to expand foreign trade. It requires no deliberate thought to see that any such treaty would be at the expense of the American farmer. They would pay the fiddler. Expansion of trade means more dairy and farm imports, Bolles said.

Rejection of the Smoot-Hawley tariff during the Hoover administration, Bolles said, halted imports of dairy products and gave American farmers an advantage in their home market over farmers of Denmark, Canada and New Zealand. Preservation of the home market is of utmost importance, he said, since dairy products are practically all consumed at home and the home market dictates the value of production.

Under the Democratic Underwood act, Bolles said, the duty on butter was 23 cents a pound and under the Smoot-Hawley act it is 14 cents a pound. Likewise, he pointed out, the duty on cheese and cheese substitutes was 20 per cent ad valorem under the Underwood act, while the Smoot-Hawley tariff provides a duty of 8 cents a pound, not less than 40 per cent ad valorem.

"This comparison tells the whole story as far as the dairy industry is concerned," he said.

County Lines Up Crews to Remove Snow

Intends to Keep Roads Open All Winter Along 466-Mile Front

Plans now are under way by the county highway department for its annual snow removal and drift prevention program this winter along a 466-mile front of county, state and federal highways. The department intends to keep 160 miles of state trunk highways open to traffic if it is humanely possible to do so.

Preparations for the annual battle are being made by Frank Appleton, highway commissioner. Crews have started setting up snow fence along those sections of the highways where past experience has shown that drifts are apt to form. The county this year has 39 miles of snow fence, all of which will be in place by Dec. 1, according to Mr. Appleton. Nineteen miles of the fence will be set up on state and federal roads, while the balance will be used to protect strategic points on county roads.

In its efforts to keep the roads clear, the department will use 14 trucks, all equipped with plows, and four tractors, equipped with plows. Most of this equipment now is being overhauled at the county garage so that it will be in readiness for the first storm. The plans this year call for the maintenance of a staff of six mechanics and a foreman at the garage all winter to keep this equipment in condition.

As has been the custom the last two years, eight of the 14 trucks will be stationed at strategic points in the county so that snow removal during a heavy storm can proceed from several points at the same time. Truck again will be stationed at Kaukauna, Freedom, Seymour, Black Creek, Shiocton, New London, Bear Creek and Dale.

Each Truck Manned

Each truck, as well as the six tractors and the four tractors which will be kept at the county garage on Highway 10, west of Appleton, will be manned by a driver and a helper. These 36 men, who are experienced, will be ready for duty at any hour of the day or night. In addition the county will keep in readiness a small crew of auxiliary workers who can be pressed into service to replace the regulars should a storm last for a period of several days.

Last year the cost of the removal of snow on Outagamie-co's highways was $17,908.00. Of this amount $12,423.95 was paid by the state for work on state highways. The balance, $5,484.14, was spent on county roads and was paid for by the county. No funds were appropriated for the work, however, by the county board last year, inasmuch as the snow removal fund balance was large enough to care for the cost.

This year there is a balance of $5,729.06 in the snow removal fund and the highway committee again is not planning to ask for county board appropriation this month. The committee feels that the balance of $5,729.06 will be sufficient to keep the county roads clear, while the state will pay the cost of the work on state and federal roads.

Last year was the first year that the state paid the cost of snow removal work on state and federal roads. Funds were furnished by an increase in the gasoline tax. Payment is made to the county on a rental basis for trucks and tractors and other equipment, rental for snow fence set up on state and federal roads and the salaries of men employed in the work.

Clubs Urged to Sponsor Meetings

Chamber Committee Arranges Tentative Schedules for Forum Gatherings

Appleton luncheon clubs are being urged this week to cooperate with the forum committee of Appleton Chamber of Commerce in a series of four forum meetings to be conducted here. As in former years, each club will sponsor one meeting with the cooperation of the chamber, the latter organization bringing speakers of national repute to the city to address the luncheon sessions.

Officials of the clubs are being advised that tentative plans call for meetings the weeks of Dec. 4, Jan. 15, Feb. 12 and March 12. They are being asked to arrange the meetings to comply with the schedule adopted by the forum committee.

This committee is composed of Dr. Lyle Douglas Utts, chairman, L. J. Marshall, A. O. Knoke, E. L. the work on state and federal roads.

Contagious Cases in City Increase to 12

The number of cases of contagious disease in the city, which has been crawling steadily upward within the past few weeks, rose to 12 last week, records in the office of Richard Groth, deputy health officer, reveal. There were two new cases of scarlet fever, both in one family, one of diphtheria, three each of chicken pox and measles, one of whooping cough, and two of tuberculosis.

National Campaign Is Concluded in Oshkosh

Oshkosh — (P) — Except for last minute appeals through the press and radio, citizens of Oshkosh may now decide their votes for president in next Tuesday's election undisturbed. The final gun of the national Republican campaign was fired last night by Congressman Charles O'Connor, Tulsa, Okla., who urged the election of President Hoover and Vice President Curtis. There are no other speeches on behalf of national candidates scheduled in Oshkosh.

Major Evers to Attend Group School Meeting

Major C. P. Evers, Green Bay, district instructor for army reserve officers, will be at the group school meeting of Appleton reservists at 7 o'clock Wednesday night at the Federal building. The officers will turn in and check lessons they have been working on for several weeks and will receive new lessons. Schools are held every first and third Wednesday. There are two classes, one for second lieutenants and another for first lieutenants.

Cross-Blending

WHAT IS IT... and how does it improve cigarette taste?

YOU'VE heard how fruit of one variety has been crossed with fruit of another to produce a new and more pleasing flavor. The loganberry, for example, is a cross between the raspberry and the blackberry.

Chesterfield's Cross-Blend gets the same result — better taste — by a different method.

It welds together the different kinds of several varieties of tobacco. Many types of Bright tobacco, a great many types of Burley tobacco, and numerous grades of Turkish tobacco are all merged into one — Chesterfield tobacco.

This welding or Cross-Blending goes beyond ordinary blending or mixing tobaccos together. It actually makes every kind of tobacco in Chesterfield partake of the qualities of every other type.

It's the Cross-Blending of fine Turkish and Domestic tobaccos that gives Chesterfields a distinctive, better taste.

They are milder. They have a flavor and aroma which, we believe, you will like.

Congressman Fails to Take Stand, Says Democratic Candidate

James E. Hughes, DePere, Democratic candidate for congress from the eighth district, attacked Congressman George J. Schneider for his failure to take a stand in the present campaign, before a crowd of about 100 at a rally at Eagle's hall last night.

Mr. Hughes said the voters of the district were entitled to know what type of leadership Mr. Schneider would recognize. He said four years ago, when Alfred E. Smith, the wet, liberal progressive, was an opponent of Herbert Hoover, the dry, reactionary stalwart, Mr. Schneider, failed to say which man he supported. This year when Roosevelt, the wet, liberal supporter of the prohibitionists, was in the race, Mr. Schneider again failed to take a stand. "This failure," he said, "comes despite the fact that other progressives have staunchly declared for Roosevelt."

An invitation to the ceremony or to the reception that will follow is just about the highest recognition of social position there is to be had.

Republicans Aim Attack on Dem's Record in House

Seek to Persuade Country That Roosevelt Isn't Worth Bother

Washington — The most nearly painless way to get an idea of what the campaign orators are talking about is to read copies of their speeches.

There are addicts who insist on listening, but they belong to a restricted and somewhat eccentric group.

Your correspondent, without benefit of stimulant, has just waded into an even half-dozen campaign addresses, which establishes a record for all time insofar as concerns speeches made by others than the presidential candidates themselves.

Two were written for delivery by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, one for Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Ahlcock, two for Secretary of War Patrick C. Hurley, and one for Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan.

From these one learns that the Republicans, fighting very desperately to stem what looks increasingly like a tidal wave of anti-Hoover sentiment have taken in a big way to belaboring the Democrats for what "Democratic" Congressmen tried to do when they had a House majority in the last session. The attempt is made to prove that Democratic congressmen are not only radical but also dangerously insane.

Boiled down, the Republican orators in their big push seek to persuade the country: 1. That President Hoover's record is better than that of the Democratic House. 2. That Roosevelt isn't worth bothering about.

The fact is, of course, that the Democratic record in the last House wasn't anything over which anyone swooned, with pride and keeping rather quiet about it. It can be examined here and there. One is reminded that the House gave Hoover about everything he wanted and that the Democratic margin of control was so slight as to make effective leadership difficult. But the record was so mediocre that, politics being what it is, the Republicans now feel themselves justified in painting it inky black.

They may soon receive a return fire from Speaker Jack Garner, but Roosevelt's speeches have given them so little to which to sink their teeth that the House performance is their one best obvious target.

The Goldborough bill designed to raise commodity price levels, the cash bonus bill (which had been passed by a Republican House before it was passed by a Democratic House), the bill for a system of guaranteeing bank deposits, the Garner measure for an immense federal building program, the proposal to advance private loans to individuals from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, direct federal unemployment relief, the Muscle Shoals government operation bill—those are the chief things which came out of the last House and are now cited by the Republican "big shots" as evidence that Democrats are unfit to rule.

"The program enacted by that House was so shameful, so reckless and so extravagant, so suicidal," says Jahneke, "that the Democrats failed to extol its wretched record when Democracy met in convention in Chicago in 1932."

And Vandenberg says: "The chief reason why American business displayed sudden and renewed vitality this summer was the fact that the adjournment of congress relieved the country of its fears for the first time in eight months, that some of the suicidal schemes hatched in the Democratic House of Representatives might succeed."

Fire Damages Attic Of Grand Chute Home

Fire starting on the attic floor of the home of Sidney Holcomb, Haveset, in the town of Grand Chute, Wednesday morning caused about $600 damage to the building and $150 to the contents. The blaze was extinguished with water from one of the fire department trucks. The department laid about 1,000 feet of hose.

The cause of the blaze is unknown, according to Chief George P. McGillan. The fire burned a hole in the attic floor, worked through the floor and wall to the roof and burned another hole there.

Hunger Parade Group Starting To Return Home

London, Nov. 2.—After dark, their thousands were augmented by thrill seeking spectators.

By 8 p. m., the huge press of spectators had overflowed into the streets and pushed near the massive iron gates leading into parliament. At that point mounted police filed silently out of Scotland Yard and converged toward parliament building from three directions.

There were boos and catcalls as the hobnob on foot pushed back the throngs into Whitehall toward Trafalgar square and away from the house of commons. One charge was made at the cenotaph, Britain's most sacred monument, when the crowd attempted to grab up wreaths.

The steady retreat continued, until the throngs were backed into Trafalgar square, tempers mounting in the process. Gradually arose resistance, and within half an hour a bitter street battle was in full swing, with mounted police packing up foot officers in the front line against the demonstrators.

The police advanced into a barrage of bricks, stones, and lumps of coal. There was much window smashing along Villiers street leading out of Charing Cross. Isolated instances of looting occurred.

The mounted police finally turned the tide, breaking the throng up into small groups, then dispersing each one, until, at midnight, all was quiet in the heart of London.

Meanwhile Hannington remained in custody, and was joined in jail by 60 or more of the demonstrators. The charge against him was attempting to incite to mutiny.

His petition, signed, he said, by 1,000,000 persons and demanding abolition of the means test and higher appropriations for the unemployed, was not presented to parliament because he scorned tradition and declined the offer of a member to present it, preferring the direct march on the house of commons.

Twenty-seven of the prisoners taken last night were arraigned in Bow-st. police station today on charges of assaulting police, wilful damage to property, and insulting behavior.

A strong force of foot police reinforced with mounted reserves was held in the vicinity in case of trouble.

John Gellatly, a young Scotsman with a bandaged head, who was declared by the police to be the leader of the Whitehall section of the mob, was sentenced to six months hard labor.

Missing Girl in Milwaukee Home

Mother Returns Josephine Hill, 16 Years Old, To Oneida

Josephine Hill, 16-year-old Oneida girl who has been the object of a state-wide search since she disappeared from her home two weeks ago, was found Tuesday at the Milwaukee detention home by her mother, Dr. Rose Hill, who brought her home last evening. The Milwaukee police picked the girl up a few days ago when she went out to look for work dressed in boy's clothing. They took her to the detention home where she gave a fictitious name.

The girl's mother went to Milwaukee a few days ago on the possibility that she might be there, and in her search she went to the detention home where she found her daughter. The girl left home with only $1.50 two weeks ago Tuesday, dressed in boy's clothing. She had been staying with friends in Milwaukee she said.

Laabs Spent $52 in Election Campaign

A. W. Laabs, Republican candidate for the assembly from the first Outagamie-co. district, Wednesday filed his preliminary campaign expense report with John E. Hantschel, county clerk. Mr. Laabs spent $52.50, of which $50 was a contribution to the Outagamie County Republican committee. All candidates must file preliminary campaign expense reports with Mr. Hantschel by Saturday.

Finicky Fellows

Minneapolis—More men are hunting beauty in beauty parlors than ever before but they're bringing increased work as well as more business. That's what Emil Ronde, of Chicago, told the Minnesota hair-dressers and Cosmetologists association today.

"The number of men has increased greatly but so has the work," he said. "They are so particular."

Police Chief of Washington Also Artist, Soldier

So He Won't Lack Vocation, Even Though He Has Resigned

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—The capital city of Washington has gone through one of the most extraordinary experiences that can come to an American community.

It had, for nearly a whole year, an honest, able chief of police—a man divorced from politics, who didn't owe his job to politics and who refused to bow to politicians. But that's all over now. "Happy" Glassford has quit his job and the Washington police department goes back into the hands of the politicians.

Glassford leaves his office with an international reputation which he gained in his handling of the unprecedented situation created by the bouvau of the bonus army. Until a higher authority drove the B. E. F. out with fire, bayonet and tear gas, it was Brigadier-General Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police who maintained law and order, discipline and organization in the face of 20,000 dissatisfied, hungry men.

Glassford is "happy" no one can imagine this lanky, grinning six foot-three phenomenon because he probably is the only one of his type who ever held an important public job. The best key to his personality is the fact that his friends have always called him "Happy" because he has so obviously found fun in performing himself in the successful throning of everything he has ever undertaken.

His career has been mainly military, but his sidehins in themselves have served to make Glassford an astonishing figure. He took highest honors at West Point and became the youngest American general on the line in the World War. He won medals and decorations for "invaluable service," became one of the few generals to be wounded, stayed in the Army until about a year ago, when he was chief of the General Staff's mobilization section, and then retired at the age of 47, because he was "bored by inaction."

Found Self Opposed
During that military career, using accumulated leaves, he became a mural and portrait painter of recognized talent, a newspaperman, an electrician and barker in a traveling carnival and various other things that he fancied.

He resigned as police chief because he found himself hamstrung by the politicians in and out of the police department when in the interests of efficiency he sought to demote and transfer two old-time police inspectors who were part of the old "machine," Glassford, resigning said:

"I find myself in the unequal position of so many other police chiefs in the United States, namely, holding a position of great responsibility but deprived of the essential authority to discharge it without fear and without favor."

Arguing His Point
Glassford had been persuaded to take over the difficult job by the promise that he would have a free hand in selection and assignment of his principal assistants and by the assurance that he was needed to rescue the force from demoralization accompanied by poor law enforcement.

Almost at once came 1500 Communist-led "Hunger Marchers" for an unprecedented demonstration. Glassford surrounded them, ushered them in, let them parade and demonstrate and then ushered them out. He refused to let them become martyrs and averted what might have been a very bloody disturbance. The country marveled at his success. Other "marchers" came and he handled them, too.

Eviction of B. E. F.
Last May the bonus marchers came and everyone remembers about that. The administration and the commissioners wanted the bonus army driven out. Glassford, who had the B. E. F. eating out of his hand literally as well as figuratively because he was seeing to it that this might produce the most serious disturbance in the nation's history and demanded written orders. No one ever dared give the order to the capital's small police force, but the troops finally were called out. Glassford had urged the veterans to go home and felt that the movement was slowly dissolving.

When Attorney General Mitchell tried to justify the eviction by describing the B. E. F. as a menace composed of Reds and criminals, Glassford branded his report false by citing police records and statistics. Such a defiance of the administration by a subordinate official created a national sensation.

Glassford's plans are vague. He is being tendered many positions, but he won't take anything unless he thinks he will enjoy it. For, being a Jack-of-all-trades, he is economically independent.

Woman Given Divorce On Cruelty Charge

A divorce was granted by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court yesterday afternoon to Mrs. Marie Schanke, 24, Appleton, from her husband, John Schanke. Menasha. Mrs. Schanke charged her husband was cruel and inhuman in that he had a violent temper, struck her, and drank too much. Mrs. Schanke was given custody of a minor child. The couple was wed at Appleton Feb. 23, 1928, and separated Sept. 15, 1932.

Seeks Bids for Air Compressor

Water Commission Also Votes to Buy Calumet-co Bonds

The Appleton water commission voted to advertise for bids on a used air compressor at its meeting at city hall Tuesday afternoon. The compressor is to have a capacity of 110 cubic feet is to be mounted on a trailer, and must have a clutch between the engine and the compressor.

The chairman and secretary of the commission were authorized to purchase $3,000 worth of Calumet-co bonds on a 4.10 per cent basis, and to invest the balance of $2,000 in the depreciation reserve sinking fund cash account in suitable securities and place them in the depreciation fund.

One carload of six inch pipe and five gallons of material for repairing leaks in concrete, will be purchased, and the distribution department was ordered to replace approximately 1,000 feet of two-inch pipe with six-inch cast iron pipe on streets where it is most necessary. The matter of installing a check valve on suction line of gasoline pumping unit was left to William Gallaher and William Timm.

Warmer Tomorrow, Weatherman Says

Appleton can expect a little relief Thursday from the freezing and near freezing weather of the past four days, weather forecasts for Wisconsin indicate. The forecast for Thursday is slightly warmer except in the extreme northwest section where there will be rain and snow. The skies will be partly cloudy.

The mercury last night remained at the same level as the previous 24 hours. It dropped to 34 degrees early this morning and was up to 36 at noon. There was a rather heavy snowfall for a few minutes last night and an occasional flurry this morning.

Two Appleton Men Face Dry Charges

Agents Raid Forster Soft Drink Parlor on E. John-st

Frank Forster, operator of a soft drink parlor at 1929 E. John-st, and George Walter of Appleton were arraigned yesterday afternoon before Commissioner John F. Watermolen, Green Bay, charged with the manufacture of beer, following a raid here Monday by federal prohibition agents. They were bound over to Nov. 9, and released on $500 bond each.

Ted Hendrickson, Denmark, also appeared before the commissioner on a charge of violating the prohibition laws and was bound over to Nov. 9, and released on $500 bond. Camille Paus, proprietor of Monroe Inn, and Stanley Buvd, owner of Southside Inn, both in Two Rivers, were bound over to the January term of federal court on charges of violating dry laws when they appeared at a hearing today before the commissioner. They supplied $500 bonds each.

That a search for a rat in the basement of a home on Oneida-st. revealed a store of supplies that would keep several Armenian families from starving for the rest of the winter. The rats had accumulated over a bushel of pecans, pieces of bread, carrots, potatoes, hickory nuts, walnuts and pecans, and piled them neatly in a corner of the basement.

THE FALL FESTIVAL

Frosty mornings, wind whistling through leafless trees, birds gathering in flocks as they point to the south, industrious householders taking down summer screens and putting up storm windows. The autumn season is here and the provident man and woman is preparing as rapidly as possible for the long, dreary cold days of winter that soon will be upon us.

But Autumn, with all its anxieties over the coming winter and regrets for the summer that is past, is not without its compensations, and not the least of these is the annual Fall Festival observed in Appleton tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. This great merchandising event, in which practically every merchant in the city cooperates, is known in every corner of Appleton's extensive trading area and annually attracts thousands to the city.

No more opportune time could be found for an event of this nature. Farmers have completed their year's work, housecleaning is pretty well completed and people generally are preparing themselves for cold weather just a few weeks off. Appleton merchants are doing the shopping public an extra service through their cooperative effort at this time of year.

The Fall Festival is opportune also in that it probably offers the last chance to buy quality merchandise at the present low prices. Metropolitan buying centers report a pronounced solidifying of prices, and the prediction is freely made that when present stocks of merchandise are gone they can be replaced only at higher prices. Appleton merchants, agreeing with this probability, have gone to great lengths to stock their stores with merchandise that probably cannot be duplicated at prices for which it will be offered shoppers during the Fall Festival.

The Fall Festival and the other cooperative events sponsored by Appleton merchants have had the result of making Appleton the trading center for a large area that long ago was extended beyond the confines of Outagamie county. People in this extensive area have come to regard Appleton as their natural buying center and they know from experience that no finer buying opportunities are offered anywhere than can be found here. Appleton people who have these opportunities at their front doors are in a particularly happy position. They enjoy an advantage that must be envied by thousands of others. While there still may be people here who occasionally think they see greener grass in other pastures, the vast majority learned long ago that the maximum in economy and satisfaction is offered in Appleton stores. The Fall Festival will be another striking proof of this.

THE BIG CIRCUS IN TEXAS

The nomination of "Ma" Ferguson as the Democratic candidate for governor of Texas has produced a most unusual and interesting political situation in that state.

Mrs. Ferguson defeated Governor Sterling in the primaries to head the Democratic ticket. Accusations of illegal voting were hurled right and left by both factions and after several weeks of trying to prevent her certification as the nominee, the anti-Ferguson Democrats were forced to give up the fight. It appeared certain that "Ma" Ferguson would ride to victory on the Roosevelt-Garner band wagon.

However, such bitter feeling has been aroused against Mrs. Ferguson, who is an ex-governor herself and the wife of an impeached governor, that Mr. Orville Bullington, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, made a surprising statement. He offered to withdraw from the contest in favor of "an outstanding man" and support the Democratic national ticket, if Mrs. Ferguson would do likewise.

Obviously the Fergusons were not interested in this suggestion with the result that Governor Sterling is urging his Democratic supporters to vote for the Republican candidate for governor and many so-called Roosevelt-Garner-Bullington clubs are being organized throughout the state in which both Republicans and Democrats are uniting for the purpose of defeating the Fergusons.

This Bullington movement has continued to grow at such a rate that it is now plain that the next two weeks will witness one of the most hotly-contested campaigns in the history of Texas, with some prospect that a Republican governor will be elected in a year that should be overwhelmingly Democratic.

In such a situation as this, involving as it does a woman candidate for governor, her impeached husband and a confusion of party lines without parallel, one reasonable deduction can be made. The Hoover-Curtis ticket won't even gain admittance to the side-show.

MR. CHAPPLE—RIVAL OF MOSES

Mr. Chapple has made a discovery. He has developed one of the finest rules of thumb by which to measure and decide every public question. To use his own language:

"Whenever I consider a public question I ask myself—Is it good for the family and the home? If I think it is I am for it. If I think it is not I am against it."

What a perfectly lovely idea!

Here we have government simplified as it never was before. The sun shines gloriously on our future. Even the clouds of the depression are scattered. For Mr. Chapple has pounded into shape the golden key that will unlock the dark mystery of all the ages. Why did not someone ever think of this before?

The American people are safe. They may leave their homes and go to the movies whenever they like. Mr. Chapple is stamping around defending those American homes from the Red Menace, the Yellow Peril, the Blue Devils, or any other invader.

Senator Blaine with his loose ideas, and looser ways, gave Mr. Chapple enough material so that he was successful in likening the senator's purpose to the Mongolian ideas that seep out of Moscow.

But that skirmish is over and Mr. Duffy is contending with Mr. Chapple for the senatorship, although the latter seems to think he is still mixing blows with Blaine. That Duffy isn't attacking the home doesn't make any difference. Chapple is going to defend it anyway.

Radicalism won't go against Duffy. He might properly be described as a liberal-minded conservative. Indeed after Duffy took his discharge from the army he set to work to build up conditions that actually protect American homes and at about the time that Mr. Chapple went to Russia in order to learn that communism was rotten, a thing the rest of America that wasn't easily rattled always knew.

Mr. Chapple must remember, however, that the American people like variety. He shouldn't overplay the home. That idea may go stale on him. May we not suggest that now and then he speak about like this: "I weigh every question by the good of my country. If it is good for my country I am for it. If it isn't I am against it. I was lying awake one night staring at the twinkling stars looking for a way out from the woes that beset the world, even along the Milky Way, when all at once there crashed through my head a great principle and it was this: Test everything by the good of the country. Well, said I to myself, that ought to be the salvation of the land. Funny how dumb people are and have been all through the ages not to think of this before."

Here is a principle purified of passion and prejudice. Anyone who could think that up deserves to sit among the mighty of the earth and give out counsels to the ordinary statesmen who should be grateful to consult with such an authority.

It is often declared that the true glory of genius consists in carrying to perfection a single noble idea. So, in the future, when a thankful people erect some marvelous Pantheon of Time they will place in it four marble busts in commemoration of those men with genius whose lives and acts were compelling factors in guiding the march of humanity.

The first bust should be that of Moses with the inscription, "He created law." The second bust should be that of Augustus with the declaration, "He organized government."

The third should be that of Lincoln with the expression, "He made all men free."

And the last will certainly be that of Mr. Chapple with brilliant letters of gold reflecting his magnificent thought, "He was the first to protect the home—even from woodpeckers."

ROOSEVELT AND BEET SUGAR

A statement is going the rounds for the purpose of impressing farmers or stockholders in beet sugar companies that the election of Governor Roosevelt will mean ruin to that industry.

The claim is predicated upon "a statement attributed to Governor Roosevelt." It doesn't say who attributes the statement to Governor Roosevelt nor does it seek to quote the governor. It is one of a thousand similar wild and completely unfounded statements.

We think that candidates in an election should have the right to state their own positions on various questions and not have a partisan attack them unmercifully for something that someone told his uncle's grandmother that a fourth cousin of his second wife's first husband had "attributed" to one of the candidates.

Quite recently Governor Roosevelt spoke at Baltimore, Maryland. The exact date was October 25, 1932.

At that time he said:

"Of course it is absurd to talk of lowering tariff duties on farm products. I declared that all property in the broader sense springs from the soil. I promised to endeavor to restore the purchasing power of the farm dollar by making the tariff effective for agriculture, and raising the price of farm products. I know of no excessive high tariff duties on farm products. I do not intend that any action necessary to protect the farmer shall be lowered. To do so would be inconsistent with my entire farm program, and every farmer knows it and will not be deceived."

ONE MAN, out of work, hungry and cold as bitter than he was before. . . . Sunday night we found that out. . . . came out of a restaurant, full of food, hurrying to drive a friend to an already over-due appointment. . . . as the car backed out, a hand touched the right hand window. . . . it was a man's mittened hand, reached out in the same sort of gesture which you see almost every day if you get downtown. . . . we had no time to stop, kept the car backing out. . . . the hand withdrew, faded back then, the face above the mittened hand showed pale under the street light. . . . it was a decent sort of face, clean, but with an expression as though it had just been struck. . . . bitter, resigned. . . . that brief glance at him, his shoulders sagging, told the whole story of a hungry man and his mental suffering. . . . our thoughts were not particularly happy as we drove down the street, yet the climax had not occurred. . . . dropping our passenger, we drove back toward the spot where that decent-bitter face had shown pale under the light. . . . the man was gone. . . . then, that helpful premonition, which warns a driver to look ahead, struck us. . . . we swerved the car to the middle of the street with a quick tug at the wheel. . . . we had just missed a man, walking slowly across the street, absolutely heedless of rushing cars. . . . it was the man with the mittens and the decent-bitter face. . . . he disappeared along the sidewalk there. . . . he knew that danger accompanied his driving jaywalk. . . . one of several cars might have struck him. . . . did he care? . . . no. . . . you know what he must have been thinking.

Some of the big-city sport scribes would do well to check up on their schedules. A Chicago paper, the other day, had Michigan playing at Minnesota a week from Saturday. Minnesota plays at Madison that day. A Milwaukee sheet carried the news that Wisconsin will meet Illinois this week for the first time in a decade. The decades must be growing shorter. Wisconsin and Illinois played at Champaign last year.

Hallowe'en appears to have been a disappointment. Just the customary noise and disturbance made by the younger generation. But the two presidential candidates did their best to scare you; at that, Maybe Hallowe'en WAS a success.

Last week, being on Notre Dame's second team was a high honor, not to be misunderstood. This week, however, it's another thing altogether. In a "drastic shake-up" three of the first team have been demoted to the second and they'll have to watch the three boys to keep from running them down. The Notre Dame stadium to end it all and get away from the terrible humiliation of what has happened to them.

MICE, ABSOLUTELY FREE!

"Want a pair of mice," says Janet, "in a week or two?"
 Build a cage and I will give two of mine to you. Get to ask your mother first? I can tell you now.
 Mice are something parents absolutely won't allow!
 "Here's the way to do it. I have many a mouse spare."
 Come and look at them today and pick yourself a pair.
 They're all furred out and ready. Yes, they're at the proper age.
 So go and get some grown-up man you know to build a cage.
 "But don't you tell your mother, and don't you tell your dad.
 And don't you sit around and say that mice you wish you had.
 For though they're just as pretty and as cute as they can be.
 It seems white mice are something every grownup hates to see."
 "If you ask them may you have them No!" is what they're sure to say.
 But if you take them home with you perhaps they'll let them stay.
 That's how I had to do it. Now my cage is full of mice.
 And I wish you'd take a couple, for you'll find them very nice."

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
 Wednesday, Nov. 6, 1907

Catholic priests in Appleton had received printed blanks to be filled out in the taking of the Catholic census in the Green Bay diocese under the direction of Bishop Fox, who was doing the work for Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis who had been appointed United States special census agent.

J. L. Estey, Columbus, Calif., was in Appleton to spend some time at his home here.

Frank Leimer returned to Cloquet, Minn., after spending the past six weeks with his daughter, Mrs. Paul Frank, Union-st.

The Tuesday club met the previous day at the home of Mrs. F. A. Dole, Atlantic-st.

Mr. and Mrs. Jule Woehler entertained the Star Whist club at their home the previous evening.

ENGLISH IN AUSTRALIA

A Melbourne newspaper has been castigating the talkies for corrupting the Australian language by importing slang, although the very little American slang which has gone into local currency usually justifies its existence by its aptness and pungency. Nothing is said about the degradation of good English words by the pontiffs of publicity.

"Realism," "cynicism" and "sophistication" are amongst the victims of these masters of imaginative literature. Realism in radio means exact reproduction. In the films it means real snow in a picture.

According to the dictionary a cynic in its modern meaning is a sneering, captious person, a misanthrope, a pessimist. On the fillums it means an empty-headed flapper, who after having a good time on several men's money, escapes with her virtue intact into matrimony with the handsome hero.

A "sophisticated" play observes the same formula, the remarkable thing is that talkie addicts know exactly where these signposts will lead them. Just as an illiterate Russian moujik knows that he will be able—other things being equal—to buy kvatsova if he goes into a shop with a large boot painted on it—The Bulletin (Sidney, Australia).

Personal Health Talks

MIGRAINE ASSOCIATED WITH RHINITIS

Migraine or megrim is a "neurosis"—that is, a disorder of the nervous system for which there is no known pathology or discoverable organic cause. Epilepsy is also such a "neurosis." Rhinitis has been described as the "sensory equivalent of the motor neurosis, epilepsy."

Offspring of an alcoholic, feeble-minded, epileptic or insane parent are as likely to be migrainous as they are to be epileptic.

The characteristic which distinguishes migraine from ordinary headaches is that the seizures are periodic and each attack is ushered in by an aura or warning sensation (as in epilepsy). This warning may be a zig-zag flashing of light at one side of the field of vision (fortification spectra) or just a vertigo or dizziness, or some strange sensation that warns the victim to prepare for the coming of the headache. The headache is always one-sided and soon or later it brings nausea and perhaps vomiting.

Hence the common name "sick headache." But it is a common mistake to ascribe the headache to the stomach disturbance; the truth is that the stomach is upset by the great pain and severe pain that lasts for hours is quite likely to produce nausea and vomiting. Another common error is to infer from the fact that bile is present in the material vomited, that the trouble is due to "biliousness," whatever that may be, and on this real theory to ply the sufferer with medicines which purport to correct the "biliousness." Now the truth is that repeated retching and vomiting is bound to bring up bile in any case, provided the liver and bile apparatus be normal, for this is the natural consequence of reversed peristalsis. Besides, there is no such thing as "biliousness" anyway.

A correspondent says she has been greatly benefited by taking calcium lactate tablets. "I was a case in April and lasted, through the summer, yielding not at all to treatment by many doctors, and in return I should like to offer to your many readers a remedy for the relief of sick headache accompanied by nausea and obstinate vomiting from which I have always suffered periodically. We discovered the remedy, ourselves."

Keep a thin cloth wet with rubbing alcohol or whiskey on the pit of the stomach. Do not let it get dry. Lay a heavy wash cloth wrung out of ice water on the eyes and forehead, turning it as it gets warm. After you are sure the stomach irritation is quieted take a quarter of a cup of black coffee. This treatment relieves attacks in a few hours that formerly prostrated me all day.

A masseuse who has lately arrived here from Sweden tells me they give calcium lactate to children who have "running nose" in the old country. Calcium lactate treatment has brought much relief to many victims of hay fever and also to victims of asthma. It is likewise a good remedy in case of hyperacidity of the stomach. What I mean, if you don't it doesn't matter. In any case it does no harm to try it. Ten grains three times a day, after food is a fair dose, and that should be continued daily for eight or 10 weeks for a fair trial.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Refrigerator Economies
 Do fresh cooked vegetables lose any of their food value if kept for two or three days in the covered dish in a refrigerator which always maintains the same degree of coldness. (Mrs. A. B. K.)

Answer—Not in calories or fuel value, but they lose some of their vitamin value on standing.

Bursts
 Some time ago I remember you had an article about bursts in the shoulder. My sister is now suffering with this and it is wearing her down terribly. (Mrs. T. A. E.)

Answer—I suggest a series of daily diathermy treatments for two weeks. If this does not bring relief, surgical removal of the inflamed bursa.

Baby Stands on Her Own
 Baby eight months old stands in her crib. Will this make her more likely to become powedged? She weighs 17 pounds. (Mrs. L. J.)

Answer—No. A baby's spontaneous attempt to sit, stand and walk are o. k. and rather tend to prevent bowing of the legs or other rickety conditions. The objectionable thing is encouraging or aiding the baby to attempt these things before he or she is ready. (Copyright, John F. Dille Co.)

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THE horse began to dip and dive and Duncy shouted, "Sakes alive! We surely have a funny horse. Why doesn't it fly straight?"

"This makes me dizzy as can be and does not appeal to me. Let's try and make it travel at a safer, saner gait."

So Scouty yelled right out, "Hey, whoa! Where do you think we were to go? If it is all the same, we'd like to travel up, not down."

"The sky seems safe because it's clear, so kindly keep us all up here. If you dive down again, you may land in some little town."

The horse replied, "Oh, my, don't fret. I haven't thrown you lads out yet. I thought you'd like a thrilling ride. That's why I dashed around."

"But you seem scared, so I'll be afraid and take a dive. Give me a fuss." The next thing that you Tynies know, you'll be safe on the ground."

"Oh, no, cried Windy, 'Don't do that. Gee, you might slip and land us flat. I fear you'll take a nose dive.' But the horse dropped, just the same."

"When they were near the ground they saw a sight that filled them all with awe. A farmer's big machine was stalled. Now, wasn't that a shame?"

"Please land and we will help the man. At least we'll do all that we can," said Copy. Then, with one more dive, the horse was on the ground.

The farmer shortly cried, "Hello! Please help me. Jack! Give me a fow. At yonder farmhouse you can visit. That's where I am bound."

Said Scouty, "That's all right with us, if our horse doesn't start a fuss." The horse then snapped, "Oh hitch me up! I'll gladly tow his car."

"In fact, it will be fun for me. I am a real strong horse, you see. I hope, however, that the pull will not be very far." (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.)

Seen And Heard In New York

BY WILLIAM GAINES

New York — Young women from the south sometimes complain because New York men don't hop up to give them their seats in the subway. The girls don't think they should have to stand while men sit down. Some frankly glare their resentment, but it doesn't do much good. Obstinate fellows just burrow their noses in newspapers and continue to hog the seats.

A few months here either convinces the girls that men have equal rights to subway seats or reconciles them to a deplorable disregard of the old chivalric code. New York women simply take it for granted that they are going to stand in public conveyances when all seats are occupied.

On a crowded subway express the other day a decrepit old gentleman offered his seat to a strong young woman who got on at Grand Central.

"Thank you, I prefer to stand," she said, appreciatively. There was no reprimand in her voice directed toward younger men who had failed to rise. Yet two hopped up at once, offering to make room for her in evident admiration of her attitude.

It must be added that the same fellows who are indifferent to seeing a buxom miss hanging onto a strap, will pop up readily enough to give their places to elderly women. And it goes without saying that if a girl is extraordinarily nice and gets a seat, no matter how crumpled the subway may be, Subwayward New Yorkers.

Speaking of New York subway riders, those of long experience develop an artistry in the handling of newspapers which can't be really taught but be matched in other big towns.

The reader holds his journal in a fold no larger than a magazine and, by intricate twists, manages to turn the pages on a dime, so to speak. He must do it without getting his elbow into his neighbor's eye, for his nerve-scraped neighbor in the subway is ready to make an issue of shoves and nudges.

It's just one of those things that come to be second nature with New Yorkers, like dodging taxis and suspecting strangers who offer to sell "valuable diamonds" for two dollars.

Vaudeville
 Dave Appleton, visiting in England after a successful invasion of the music hall, booked passage on the ritzy Aquitania. Which just goes to show what a boy from Russia can do when he puts his mind to it.

Only 14 years ago Appleton was in England, with nothing but a great faith in his ability as an entertainer, and the belief that if he could get to America he could get a break. He came over in steerage.

Owen Moore has been seen in vaudeville hereabouts recently. The veteran of the screen is no stranger to the stage, by the way. He started a career behind the footlights shortly after his arrival in this land, as a boy of 14. The experiment to school for awhile out in Toledo, and returned to the stage. He branched into pictures under the old "Biograph" banner, and was teamed with Mary Pickford.

Quincy Adams which has brought favorable comment from the critics.

Van Nuy's Another
 The man seeking to end the long political career of Jim Watson of Indiana, Frederick Van Nuy—is another interesting personality.

Van Nuy would come to the senate no stranger to the politically minded in Washington. He was a law partner of the late Senator Ralston of Indiana.

It was Van Nuy who made the nominating speech for Ralston at the famous Democratic convention at Madison Square Garden in 1924. In that convention, when Smith and McAdoo were in such a hopeless deadlock, at one time Ralston loomed as the compromise candidate.

Third Party Faces Crisis In Minnesota

Either to be Strengthened Or to Face Oblivion, Leaders Think

St. Paul, Minn. — (P) — Leaders who have guided the Minnesota Farmer-Labor movement to control the state administration and representation in both branches of congress believe that Nov. 8 election day will bring the infant third party to the critical cross roads of its career.

They see one fork, rough and rocky at the start, winding towards a larger field and a place in the national political picture; another towards the plains of defeat and oblivion where many third party efforts have ended their marches.

One of these leaders, Floyd E. Olson, seeking his second term as governor, this year is leading the party through its most vigorous campaign since the baptismal fires of its founding year, 1918, with a bid for every office in the state involving party designation.

Minnesota's nine representatives in congress will be elected at large and in that battle the third party has drawn upon some of its oldest campaigners in the hope of making a clean sweep which would better equip it to carry out its ambition to expand.

Johnson in Race

Agnes Johnson, former United States senator, and Arthur C. Townley, head of the Non-Partisan league during its peak of power when it controlled the North Dakota state administration, have campaigned steadily since they emerged as nominees in the June primary. Other Gov. Henry Arons and Paul John Kvale, the party's only remaining member in the national house, are among the other candidates who long have been on the party's firing line.

Olson's fight for reelection has been completed by the national presidential election which revived energies in the state which two years ago fell to low ebb when Olson swept into office.

Then the Democratic nominee for governor announced his support of Olson during the campaign and later became an appointee of the first Farmer-Labor governor. This time, John E. Regan, an ardent supporter of Alfred E. Smith for the presidential nomination before the Chicago convention, is the candidate. He has stumped the state for three months for himself and the party's presidential candidate, Governor Roosevelt.

Olson, Johnson and most of the Farmer-Labor candidates have endorsed Roosevelt, but another wing of the party in the state is reported on the National Farmer-Labor ticket. Julius J. Reiter, mayor of Rochester, the medical center, is its candidate for vice president, the running mate of Jacob S. Coxey of Ohio. Olson definitely refused to join that movement, asserting that "it would be futile until our party has built up some strength in other states."

Attempt Comeback

Republicans, who have been defeated in few state elections, are attempting a comeback with Earle Brown, a millionaire who seldom makes a speech more than ten minutes in length, as their candidate for governor. He has concentrated on a pledge to reduce state expenditures with brief statements in support of the reelection of President Hoover.

Three of the eight Republican congressional representatives were defeated for nomination in the June primary and five incumbents who remain in the race are Harold Knutson, August H. Andresen, W. I. Nolan, C. G. Selvig and W. A. Pittenger. Other party nominees for congressional seats include two former governors, Theodore Christianson and J. A. Burnquist. A sticker campaign is being made in behalf of Victor Christgau, insurgent Republican incumbent, who was defeated in the primaries.

Democratic congressional candidates include Silas M. Bryan, son of Governor Bryan of Nebraska, and a nephew of the late W. J. Bryan, who upset family tradition by campaigning vigorously in opposition to the eighteenth amendment. Einar Hoidale, defeated by Senator Thomas D. Schall, Republican, two years ago, and who has a contest pending challenging Schall's right to the seat, is another Democratic candidate.

Senator Hendrik Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, while campaigning for Olson, has taken no position in the national presidential race this year nor since he supported LaFollette in 1924.

County Leader in Pheasant Raising

Farmers and Game Associations Cooperated, Grimmer Points Out

"Combined efforts of Outagamie-co farmers and Outagamie Fish and Game Protective association, and the Appleton Izak Walton League have made one of the outstanding records in pheasant production in Wisconsin this year," said William F. Grimmer, state superintendent of game upon receipt of the final report.

The report was prepared by R. J. Meyer, vice president of the Outagamie Fish and Game Protective association, which listed the reports of the activities carried on in 1933. This report summarizes the results obtained from state pheasant eggs sent to E. W. Shannon, Appleton; R. J. Meyer, Appleton; H. G. Price, Dale; Steve Otis, Hortonville; Al VanStraten, Shiocton; Henry Brandt, Black Creek; and J. J. Janzen, Kaukauna.

In addition to state eggs there were hatched from privately purchased eggs, 748 birds from 800 eggs. Of these, 221 birds were raised to seven weeks or more before liberation, but most of the birds were allowed their liberty after three or four weeks.

From 1,400 state eggs shipped in to Outagamie-co there were hatched 1,156 pheasants, of which 388 were released to seven weeks before being liberated.

"Of particular interest in the Outagamie-co report is the fact that so many farmers co-operated with so many sportsmen in carrying on the program. The eggs were distributed in small lots, and 87 farmers co-operated."

"The more people who can be induced to work in a program of this sort, the more sure the program is of success. This work in Outagamie county is outstanding, considering the number of co-operators."

A doctor in England is stated to require a field of between 1400 and 1500 patients to earn a fair income.

Wool and Fur Combined in Smart Coats

Wide Variety of Furs and Materials Offered Festival Shoppers

Famous—that's the only word to describe perfectly the coat trends for this winter.

The characteristics responsible for this fame include the lavish fur, unusual beauty in lines and sleeves all puffed up with great importance.

Jaunting through coat departments will show all these characteristics which will win your heart and purse strings. Never have coats been so luxurious looking, and we might add, smarter. Fur no longer reposes in lumpy collars, it's curved and twisted and dipped to match the contour of a collar or follow a subtle cape-line. Many times the fur is put on the coat in tiers to show bits of the coat material between the strips. Fur cuffs when they are, become decidedly huge, although new coats can be quite furless and still be the favorite of the wardrobe.

Enough mummy woollens: soft plain suedes and self striped suedes are the fashionable materials to be found here, accenting fur treatment and individual sleeve designs.

Sleeves are perhaps the most important part of the coat this year, since they have been carefully designed to give the new broad shouldered effect without looking the least bit top heavy.

Black of course is an important color with two shades of brown called deep African and rum interesting tones. Other popular colors include this new bronze green, boxwood green, rubytone, empress blue and ever sought greys.

One interesting coat in green has a collar of natural Siberian squirrel that hugs the neck and buttons up for all the world like the chin chin collar of by-gone Flora Dora days.

The detachable qualities of many of the fur trims give coats this season a practicality and double duty, they have never had before. A cape of fur comes off the coat, leaving it tailored for a street costume.

One outstanding sport coat seen in one of the departments is of British tweed in a new grey shade. A short furred lapel in military tab catches down the front of the coat with snappy Schiaparelli buttons holding it on. The collar is one of these pouch affairs that snuggle around the throat.

With a slick pretty gesture, the fur is off the coat and lo, there stands a smart sport affair with double breasted effect, one side closing and a perky French metal belt not at all dependent on the fur for its double role chic.

Another attractive coat line with a cape has an elbow length cape edged in fur with the neckline also edged in fur that comes down the front to connect with the cape line in a thoroughly smart C-stance Bennett gesture.

The variety of furs alone make this year's coats beautiful. They include natural Russian fish, fischer dyed fish, squirrel, both natural and sable dyed, logwood seal, Persian lamb, Kolinsky, Jay and American mink, black lynx, black fox and black wolf, red cross-fox and beaver.

Beaver has been given special attention this year, since it has as much the lure and gracefulness of a fabric. This has been achieved by separating the fur from the leather, thus giving it a softness and pliability.

Canadian fox and wolf deserve creditable mention as leading fur trims, especially the perfect color blending of the blue wolf and fox which may be burgundy tinted. Then silver fox and caracul are two other furs widely used.

Another feature are the intriguing muffs that are being shown with fur pieces, especially the flat furs such as krimmer, Persian lamb and caracul, beautifully adapted to dainty muffs just big enough for two hands to meet.

Rush for Ribbon To Make Hairbows

Younger maidens of grade school age have taken to hair bows by the schoolful. It all started last year sometime when some artistic mother put a bow on her young daughter's curly head to match a new dress.

Since that time Appleton ribbon counters have been doing a rushing business matching all daughters' dresses. One counter, abounding in hair ribbons of all sizes, colors and descriptions, has some attractive checked and plaid designs. They sponsor the narrow bands for the wee, little girl, and say she may wear a rosette band like little girls used to do many years ago.

For the most part, older children wear their bows perched over one ear in a fastener. One type of hair bow shows small red checks, almost like dots on a white background with a narrow strip of red on each side of the ribbon.

Bridge Equipment Tells You How to Put on Party

For bridge minded folk there's news a-plenty from contract and auction battlement in the gift shops and departments of Appleton stores.

First comes to mind the trend for better and firmer tables to play on since bridge seems to have taken as firm a hold on our households as the family meals. One grand set is in walnut with a leather effect center to play on the brown leather being repeated in the four collapsible chairs. These chairs, although collapsible, are fashioned of walnut as well, with comfortable backs for a change.

If you should be at a loss over having a clever party you might trot yourself down to some of these places that progressive sets all made up with ideas that will be sure to please. For instance, the formal garden party progressive game is interesting by virtue of the possibilities of decoration. Score pads and tallies keep in line with the formal garden idea with each person a certain flower, directed to play at one of the three tables, the rock garden, the formal garden and the rose arbor.

A gay set that reminisces a bit is that of the gay nineties when towns were small and young folk met at the church socials and band concerts. Each person assumes the name of a familiar village personage and is directed to meet his or her friend at the general store, the town square or church social, the three tables.

Howlers and Prowlers, a story of dogs and cats in a card game and several other interesting ideas are among the progressive party sets.

The Colonial influence is readily seen in tallies this season, commemorating, I suppose the bi-centennial year. An individual double deck of cards is a Martha and George group with the silhouettes of each pictured in white and circled with gold stars on an all red and all blue background. It's rather fun to shop for cards because there are so many funny kinds ranging from queer and loveable dicky birds to soldiers on parade. The motifs include modernistic designs, calico dogs and cats, or the calico elephant and jackass for the political minded.

Hosts of intriguing prizes are all over the stores most of which you'll find on dollar tables. They include all sorts of what nots and interesting gadgets that most winners would enjoy working into a passion for a five grand slam bid over.

Some of the fascinating gifts that are different seen in the various shops include bobtail cigarette canisters, which are very smart now, Italian cigarette boxes, brass ash trays that fit in a neat pile, copper bowls, various pieces of decorated Russian ware, unusual coasters. Something new and different for a man's gift is a tricky cocktail tray loaded in a clever way with favorite recipes.

For newcomers to the contract field there are the Culbertson rules of order, large table covers with all the rules carefully tabulated right in front of you before you have a chance to make a rash calculation, as well as the bid cards with the trick counts printed in the margin.

Make Face Powder To Fit Your Face

Special Formula to Suit Needs of Individual Customer

One quarter measure of blonde skin, two parts of blue eyes, a dash of freckles and a good measure of medium brown hair... that's the manner, practically, in which this new French hand blended powder is made for a customer at one of the cosmetic counters in town.

With each individual person the formula changes, and of course, a certain shade of powder goes into the mixture for blue eyes, another color for complexion with a dash of ochre, perhaps, for the dash of freckles prescribed for a meum.

sort of a person. The point to the blending is that when the mixture is finished the powder is your very own according to your own coloring. It sells in attractive little silver boxes, four ounces for $1, which lasts a very long time. When you need your next supply you only have to refer to your formula and the sales ladies will make it up for you.

An unusual bargain here from Nov. 1 to 9 is a special treatment for dry skins of this French make in a beauty kit for $1.

No Hard Task Now to Improve on Nature

What with all these beauty aids coming to the rescue of maidens it no longer matters whether you are beautiful or not. Eye shadows give your eyes an allure, according to your complexion and the time of day. Long, lustrous, artificial eyelashes are sold at one Appleton beauty shop, to make your evening gown more devastating. In a department store is a new contraption, a mother of pearl magnifying mirror to match the colors of your boudoir. At the end of the handle, concealed within it, a tweezers screws out so that one's eyebrows may be plucked to suit your personality.

This Is Time To Check Over Bedding Needs

Beauty as Well as Utility Is Marked in Season's Offerings

While we are considering beauty why not include the bedroom and look into this matter of bedding? It may be only the guest room we want to do over just now, but it's best to know about things important whether you can use them immediately or not.

And this is important.... sheets have changed sizes. Fine percales, most commonly used for durability and loveliness, are tending toward a 108 inch length where heretofore they were all the way from 90 to 100 inches. Some brilliant soul thought of more tucking facilities, thereby improving the situation mightily, that the tallest of us need no longer worry about our toes flaunting in a winter's breeze this year.

So much has happened in the coverlet field. The new covers, coverlets have changed their style somewhat, cotton spreads lead in popularity, and even plaids have changed their layout in wooly blankets.

One department is showing some lovely rainbow-striped blankets with a satin binding that make comfortable covers. The two tone reversible blankets are in another store, combining such colors as peach and green in a most practical manner. The new plaid woollens somehow seem daintier and lovelier in design than the old ones. Also, the trend is beginning for larger sized blankets in one place where better blankets are being shown 72 by 90 size for a double bed, so that they will go clean over the highest of box springs.

Satin reversible comforters, gorgeous ones of billowing softness, have taken to a center of small stitches and eight or more rows of long border stitchings, more often than not interspersed with a contrasting shade.

When it comes to attractive designs one store has a gorgeous supply of authentic and thoroughly quaint Colonial patterns. Mayflower and Colonial are two interesting patterns with floral designs, the former worth the name. For many days, worked out in a sort of patch work quilt effect. Most of the patterns are woven so that they are reversible and can be used on both sides. Medallion is another attractive pattern with a widely spread motif on a background of small sprigs of flowers.

Red bedspreads, especially adapted to a man's room, are among the collection in neat designs. Peasant Stair, a design adapted from a quaint and sturdy motif of old peasant embroidery shows a great deal of red.

An unusual cotton spread is the newingham check. This is a background of white with cool green squares of white flower petals placed at conventional distances. For inexpensive spreads, these are stunning.

Daugherty Lauds Harding; Assails

Former Cabinet Says Chief Suffered "Freedom of Press"

Columbus—(P)—Warren G. Harding was a tolerant, but sadly a president, Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general in the late president's cabinet, declared in a speech here today commemorating the 67th birthday anniversary of Mr. Harding.

Daugherty, in one of his public appearances since he retired from the cabinet, asserted "no one suffered from the so-called 'freedom of the press' as did President Harding. That the abuse of the press is all the more a stain on the life of the nation."

Speaking at a memorial service conducted by the Central Union of Public Employees, Daugherty said that Harding was one of the most tolerant of statesmen, who respected every man's religion, and regarded any church as better than none.

"As president of the United States, his outstanding achievement was the Washington conference on the limitations of armaments. Only a man of vision, courage and supreme faith in humanity would have undertaken that unprecedented step in international affairs."

"We do well to recall the past, for while the magnitude and benefits of the work of the Harding administration may have been somewhat obscured by the frenzy of suspicion, malevolent accusations and gossip, yet time, the unfailing dispenser of justice, impartially reveals as it swings onward."

"His successors... remind you that not a single policy inaugurated by President Harding has been removed or set aside. On the contrary, the most progressive measures pursued by the government today are extensions and developments of the program conceived and put into motion by the Harding administration."

"I wonder if you ever stop to visualize the anxiety, the heartache, the excessive work and worry and responsibility that devolve upon the business head of the nation."

"Abuse of men on high is not new or peculiar to this generation. Every man that ever occupied the presidential chair, no matter what his politics, has felt the sting of unjust attacks."

"The right of 'free speech' and the 'freedom of the press' is sadly abused. Men's tongues wag too freely in spreading false gossip about public officials."

"No man suffered more from the so-called 'freedom of the press' than did President Harding."

"Some day, an inspired historian unbiased and honest, will write the life of Warren G. Harding. He will surely mention the gossips and the internal works."

Court Approves 'Shots' Fired at Trumpet Player

New York—"Bla-a-a-h-h-h..." bleated Stephen Jensen's trumpet. "Wham! Bang!" yelled Arthur von Borowsky's pistol.

"Entirely justifiable," said Magistrate William C. Dodge. "Congratulations!" echoed scores of urban noise-sufferers.

And that's how von Borowsky became a hero. For not only did he take the law into his own hands and blaze away at a neighborhood noise nuisance, his action was actually commended in court.

Becomes a Hero
Now that the full significance of the affair has been brought home to him, through deeply grateful letters and telephone calls, even from total strangers, the handsome young German-American is very proud and happy.

"I never dreamed, when I shot at that trumpet player, that I was doing a real public service," von Borowsky admitted. "But now, it seems, I have established what is called a legal precedent, which maybe will permit other people to shoot horn tooters also. Or even bad sopranos, or loud radio."

"That would be fine," Borowsky, besides being an active in a textile-dyeing company and a pistol inspector in the Ordnance Department of the U. S. Army Reserve Corps, is the commander of the Touring Kayak and a boating organization.

Complete Plans For Legion Meet

Ony Johnston Post to Have Father and Son Meeting Monday

Plans for the father and son meeting of Ony Johnston post of the American Legion were completed last night at a meeting of the legion executive committee, of which the Rev. Erik D. Utis is chairman.

The post scout troop and the state championship junior baseball team will be guests. The ball club will receive miniature gold baseballs for winning the state title last summer. The presentation to be made by H. W. Miller, post athletic officer.

Certificates given by the state department of the legion to the members of championship ball team will be presented by Arthur H. Burns, post commander.

Members of the scout troop will present a court of honor ceremony and will receive their merit badge awards. Ted Frank, scoutmaster, will have charge of the scout program.

The evening's refreshments will be a typical boy's figure, consisting of sandwiches and pop.

Other matters discussed at last night's executive committee meeting concerned the new Americanization program of the state department of the legion, a discussion of membership activities, and several matters concerning the post.

Congress May Decide Seats From Kentucky

Muddled Situation Over District Elections Still Unresolved

Louisville, Ky.—(P)—Congress itself rather than the people of Kentucky may finally decide who shall represent the state in the national house of representatives, for with Election day approaching, the muddled situation over state-at-large district elections remains unresolved.

The situation arose from the 1932 legislature's redistricting act to reduce the congressional districts from 11 to 9 being declared void by federal and state courts. Candidates were nominated from the state at large in the August primary and then the U. S. Supreme court held valid a similar redistricting act in Mississippi.

In the rural districts, especially in the mountains, appeals similar to those used against Smith in 1928 have begun to appear in distribution of a publication printed in Washington, D. C., charging that the "same wet" papal conspiracy that forced the nomination of Smith and then voted solidly for him, is equally solid for Roosevelt now. "No one has come forward to publicly acknowledge distribution of the papers, which also picture Hoover as the safeguard of the American home and Roosevelt's election as meaning the return of the open saloon."

John P. Haswell, Republican state campaign chairman, said his organization had nothing to do with the publication and knew nothing about it.

Democrats Confident
Democratic leaders, loud in their claims that Roosevelt and Garner and Alben W. Barkley, Democratic state incumbent, will sweep the state, have shown themselves not at all averse to state-at-large election of congressmen. But Republicans, although not conceding the presidential race and that of Representative Maurice H. Thatcher for the senate, prefer congressional elections by districts.

They hold that regardless of how the state goes as a whole, district election would assure them victory in at least two districts, their mountain stronghold in southeastern Kentucky and the district that includes Louisville.

The state court of appeals set today for oral arguments on an appeal from state circuit court of three Republicans, seeking to force their nominations by districts, while the appeal from federal court is not expected to reach the U. S. Supreme court prior to Nov. 8.

Under Kentucky's new election law the ballots are counted the day after the election and at the court-house rather than on election night in the precincts. The law was designed to prevent any possible "over-counting" and this is the first time it has operated in a presidential race.

Kentucky was in the Coolidge column in 1924 and went for Hoover in 1928 by more than 175,000, but since then the tide has turned and all elections, state and national, have resulted in heavy Democratic majorities. Democrats are counting heavily on a continuation of that swing and are urging a change at Washington. Republicans are claiming Hoover has stemmed the depression and with a large majority of their congressional candidates on record as opposed to repeal of the 18th amendment are counting heavily on prohibition sentiment.

Six cars of police and detectives whirled up to the scene within a few minutes. With drawn guns they surrounded the club, seized von Borowsky and yanked him in to night court for disorderly conduct. After hearing the story, Magistrate Dodge refused to accept his plea of guilty. "I think you have been doing somebody a favor," commented the judge. "You had justifiable provocation. Defendant is honorably discharged."

"I now," mused von Borowsky, "I guess I can go gunning for that bagpiper."

Teachers' Funds In Insull Bonds
Madison Paper Publishes Results of Its Investigation

Madison—(P)—The Capital Times said today it has found upon investigation that $1,018,733.25 of the state teachers retirement fund, held in trust by the state annuity and investment board is invested in Insull utility bonds.

The Times said it also found that a total of $3,505,578.52 of the retirement fund is invested in various kinds of public utility securities at the present time.

The newspaper points out that the present annuity board was organized during the administration of Walter J. Kohler in 1929 and 1930 when state trust funds were consolidated.

The newspaper published today a list of 20 Insull companies and the amount of bonds of each company, which it said the board now holds in the total sum of $1,018,733.25. It also published a list of other public utility investments in the sum of $2,486,845.27.

No statement was made as to whether the funds were invested before or after the organization of the present board.

"The Capital Times obtained this information outside the offices of the state annuity and investment board by going through a mass of data in books concerning the state trust funds in the secretary of state's office," the newspaper said.

Presidential Candidates Asked for World Policies

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)

Washington — The Geneva committee and the campus forum at Lawrence college, Appleton—Wis., and Evelyn Heckendorf of the University of Wisconsin are among 176 students representing 33 colleges and universities signing telegrams to the three major presidential candidates asking them to clarify their positions on world policies.

The telegrams went to President Hoover, Governor Roosevelt, and Norman Thomas. The telegram said: "We the undersigned are American students and are now or soon will be qualified voters. We are the nucleus in America of what we hope will be the new youth movement for world recovery. We are dedicated to the discovery and active prosecution of methods of establishing world peace and just dealings among the nations by peaceful means only. We are affiliates of no one political party."

"We desire an expression from each major presidential candidate one week before election addressed to the younger voters to consider seriously. Such a statement will be communicated to hundreds of colleges and other groups of American youth for their consideration and discussion in the final week before the election. We earnestly and respectfully request you to make such a statement."

Campaigners Now Pick Audiences to Avoid Hecklers

Many Citizens This Year Seen to Have Deplorable Dispositions

Washington — One of the most notable features of this political campaign is the circumstance with which the speakers are choosing their audiences and limiting their messages to the most suitable areas.

Many of our citizens are this year possessed of a deplorable disposition to heckle and even to lend themselves to whole-hearted renditions of the lusty boo and the Bronx cheer.

So an unprecedented number of political speeches are being made in the hushed surroundings of ball clubs and garden parties for which invitation, are limited to the faithful while the general public depends on the reports in the next day's newspaper report, of course, but the results are not satisfactory.

Governor Roosevelt began the campaign by coming right into the convention hall to accept the nomination. Although it was a Democratic gathering and he received no razzberries, he really took a chance considering the splendid booing his cause had received at earlier sessions.

Mr. Hoover accepted renomination before an exclusive audience of 4000 Republican admirers, mostly official, in Constitution Hall. The bonus army, which might have picketed, had been carefully chased out of town. All potential hecklers were outside. The president will suffer little or no exposure to hecklers this year.

Roosevelt must make more crowd appearances, but when he went to Connecticut where he spoke to 2500 Democratic politicians and their friends in a pavilion and 20,000 ordinary persons heard him through loud speakers on the beach. No platform appearance before the contest.

His speech on prohibition at Seagirt before a Democratic harmony meeting was, according to the Republicans, carefully circulated only through the wet eastern states.

The season's most effective booing was administered to Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison when he attacked the characters of the evicted bonus marchers in a speech to the New York American Legion.

Political speeches of that type were quickly abandoned and when Secretary of War Pat Hurley declined to attend the American Legion's national convention at Portland to defend the president it necessary against any vote of censure it was emphasized and reemphasized that he wasn't representing the administration. Pat seemed to be heading into an especially loud booing and the thought was that this mustn't be considered directed at Mr. Hoover.

Pat's availability as a campaign speaker began to be questioned after his famous long statement about the B. F. F. had been laughed full of holes. He went to Providence and made an undisputed speech just the same—not to a crowd of people but to the Rhode Island Republican Club. The day of the heckler seems to be passing just when the hecklers are getting interested in their jobs. They will also miss those brilliant flashes of repartee sometimes exchanged when statesmen are challenged from crowds.

Remember how Vice President Curtis, reckless enough to make a rear platform appearance in a wet town and questioned by a heckler, shot back, "You dirty coward!" and so gloriously won the day?

Not all honors for snappy comebacks go to Republicans. It was that intellectual Democratic congressman, J. B. Shannon of Missouri, who asked how he squared his vote for the bonus with the country's best interests, sent his adversary sinking away in confusion by replying, "Go to hell!"

Curtis made his unexpected dry acceptance speech in his own dry home town and at once promised not to mention prohibition again in the campaign. As he was billed for a Pennsylvania campaign speech, however, politicians there feared the possibility of disturbance if he did talk about prohibition and refused to let him come unless again assured that he would keep away from that subject entirely.

Presumably, no one else will bring the matter up when he speaks because it will be just another family party—a Republican rally.

Asks Correction For Statement on Utility Proposal

Municipalities League Secretary Calls on Manufacturers' Body

Madison—(P)—Frederick N. MacMillan, secretary of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, today called upon G. F. Kull, secretary of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' association to correct what MacMillan said was an erroneous statement relating to the municipal utility amendment to be voted on Nov. 8.

In a letter to Kull he said: "It is obvious that the board of directors of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' association has misunderstood the scope of the constitutional amendment relating to the financing of municipal utilities to be voted upon Nov. 8 with the result that members of your organization have been misinformed in the report sent out under your signature."

"In the first place, you state that cities might be encouraged to go into a great variety of ventures, many of them unsuited to municipal management," and that "any business enterprise could be purchased by a municipality." This implication that municipalities could finance business ventures of various sorts is untrue. The proposed amendment is definitely limited to "public utilities."

"Your statement also holds that the proposed amendment would enable a municipality to buy and sell securities of public utilities it did not own, on the pretext of gaining control of otherwise. This is an incorrect interpretation according to those who analyzed the amendment. It seems obvious that as a municipality the amendment would require the municipality to purchase absolute control of a utility rather than any minority interest. However, a careful reading of the text will reveal these provisions can be used for purchasing, etc., a public utility only when the mortgage is secured solely by such public utility. In other words, mortgage bonds may be used to finance extensions to an existing water or electric utility, or at the time of acquisition mortgage bonds may be issued as a means of financing and acquisition of a particular utility."

Recalls Nye Act
"Your statement ignores the fact that under the Nye act passed during Governor Phillips' administration in 1919 a municipality already has the power to acquire a public utility and issue mortgage bonds in payment therefor. This amendment is necessary because our supreme court... held that while a municipality acquiring a utility could improve it, or make additions or extensions thereto and treat the cost as the cost of acquisition under the Nye act, it could not issue mortgage bonds to finance extensions or improvements of a water or electric utility already owned by the municipality.

"This proposed amendment is a non-political measure sponsored by the League of Wisconsin Municipalities. It is endorsed both by Mr. Kohler and Mr. Schmiedeman and in the platforms of the republican, democratic and socialist parties upon which candidates for state office are now campaigning, and therefore is removed from the field of politics.... It is endorsed by impartial organizations such as the Wisconsin section of the American waterworks association, and the City club of Milwaukee. It has been editorially supported by leading newspapers."

"I trust that you will supply a correction to every member of your organization prior to the election."

Stores Ready With Stocks of New Lingerie

Women Will Get Thrill Out of Fall Festival Shopping

To shopgirl or matron, schoolgirl or teacher there is nothing more exciting than shopping for lingerie, jaunting from one silken pile to another, expertly fingering a bit of satin or lace or searching for a sturdy garment for work.

Like everything else this season, there is a reason for buying and buying underwear because never before have these luxurious silken undergarments been so exquisitely made and at the same time moderately priced.

Hand made things are important this year because of this. They are so very reasonable in comparison to former years that you can buy exquisitely made garments for the price of factory made things a few years back.

You'll find the lingerie shades appealingly feminine, featuring ivory, tea rose and flesh with materials of pure dye crepes and all silk satins. Tinted laces, adjustable straps, and perfect fit to the contour of the body are outstanding highlights of the lingerie season.

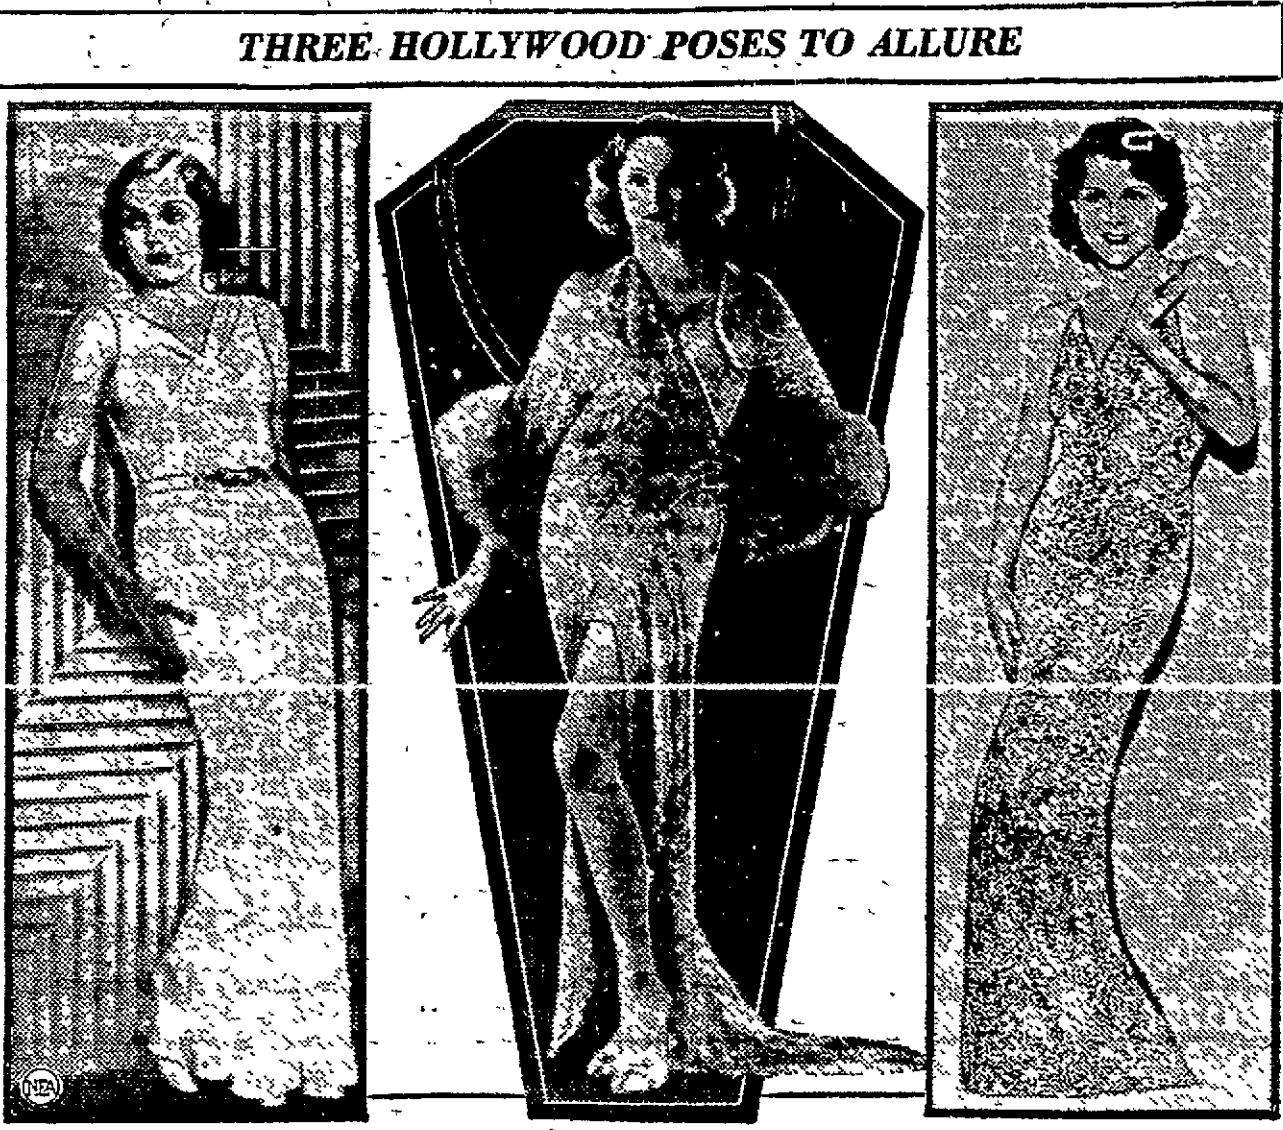

One of the most exciting things in this line are the stunning new gowns that look for all the world like evening gowns, they are made so perfectly. Flat crepes and satins fashion them in lovely lingerie colors showing low strap backs, genuine puffy sleeves and wee jackets.

High waisted affairs are shown with deep lace yokes and swirling fullness at the bottom. Interesting sprigged effects of pink posies on blue are seen on gowns and silk pajamas.

With the return to femininity, gowns are given the preference over pajamas, which have taken more and more to lounging. However many, many gorgeous pajamas are still available for the gals who still prefer to wear them.

An interesting boudoir innovation is the quaint taffeta pillow in one's lingerie department that is used for an attractive boudoir bolster and at the same time as a holder for negligee or pajama which is rolled up in its middle.

In chemise, which have taken to flowing lines of femininity and lace trims, there is a new type called the Hollywood which is made with an extra length to wear without a petticoat under woolen dresses. It comes in one piece with the fitted brassiere or in the ordinary chemise style. Of course, the garment fits to the body smoothly for wear under close clinging gowns.

You put your best foot forward, then raise the heel, one hand goes to one hip, shoulders are squared and the hip goes forward ever so slightly. And there you have the Hollywood hunch — moviedom's approved posture for allure. Here is a trio of actress-demonstrators of the hunch, and with bunches of the latest styles. Left, Adrienne Ames, who wears an evening gown of untrimmed white satin of classical lines. Center, Claire Dodd in a fur-trimmed negligee. Right, Frances Dee in a daintily cut gown of gold sequins.

Perhaps the newest fabrics in lingerie which has arrived in a shop here is called angel skin cloth, which has all the earmarks of a marvelous wearing fabric. These are tailored undies that come in briefs, panties and bloomer styles and range about $1.95 in price. Brassieres and vests match the garments. They are the softest knit silk material imaginable in the flattering hues of soft pink and blush.

In even more sporting manner are the ribbed, tight fitting silk garments that look like a veritable string bean, before worn. They come in a soft elastic rib material that includes the combination, pantie and vest set. The knit silk stretches to the body as it is put on and has many a wrinkle or a seam showing when it gets that skin tightness effect that is its selling point.

Glassware With Your Monogram Offered Here

Glassware has taken on a new dignity, that of monogramming. One shop is showing monogrammed tumblers, goblets and sherbets that are very good looking. From another place comes the brilliant idea of crystal place cards for dinner with the bit of frosted glass a permanent card on whose face the name of the guest may be written and later washed off.

Individual Tray for Each Cocktail Glass

Cocktail fanciers had better keep their eyes peeled for the individual wood cocktail trays in town. They are attractive things with a big bold cock silhouetted in color on the tray face. The glasses could be right in keeping with a pair of fighting cocks depicted in color on the sides of the glass.

New Ivy Pot

Ivy pots are becoming more and more popular. An interesting set is that which holds three colorful pottery pots in one standard. The standard itself is simple bit of metal but the pots would surely liven up some dark corner in a room.

Hard to Resist Urge of New Vases

White Pottery, Glass and Metals in Delightful Combinations

White pottery, gleaming hand blown glass and copper jugs mark the beauty of vases this season, the sort of things that you've always dreamed of having for your very own.

A modernistic note is struck in a lovely piece of Steuben glass, a goblet shaped vase whose hand blown coin dots would make any flower look entrancing in its globular area. Another low flat bowl in crystal has matching candlesticks that look like figments of imagination, they are so very attractive.

Chalk white does itself nobly in urn shapes, Grecian lines and especially a swan series at one store. A group of three swans forming the vase float lazily on a glass plateau. With these come a series of vases, single swans in varying sizes and taller urn-like vases with graceful swan handles.

Copper and brass shine very smartly as vase ornaments, with much of the brass ornamented with delicate etchings in its various shapes and adaptations. The iridescence of amethyst and soft greens still is a favorite of those who enjoy the richness of light striking through glass vases.

While discussing vases, which really cost so much less than they used to, we must not forget to mention the cheerful ivy pots that are scattered in every gift shop in

Smocks as Stylish as Your Evening Gown

Smocks have stepped out into a fashion world of smartness, departing forever from this artists' colony effects of bagginess. When a modern woman dons a smock it looks as trim and lovely as an afternoon gown.

For one thing, garish colors are not being worn any longer in smocks, the colors may be bright but they are always in good taste and well contrasted with a flattering shade.

Some for only $1.95 show a versatility of style. One, blue and white with proper red buttons down its front makes an attractive model in its fitted lines and large sleeves.

Some are in pewter, others are hanging pots either of glass or these attractive bits of pottery in wrought iron frames.

Padded Seats Make Baby More Comfortable

A handy little article found in a baby department is the collection of padded high chair seats, which are very new as well as convenient. Made of printed alphabet cottons in bright colors, the back, bottom and sides of the chair back slip into the high chair and tie onto it to make a soft seat for the youngster as soon as he has learned to sit up.

New House Dresses Have Real Appeal of Style

House dresses follow the trend of good looks with their fitted waists, lines, bodices and puffed sleeves. One place has sun fast washables that cost less than a dollar in gay prints and nearly any combination of colors. These cold mornings many women, it is found, wear one of these inexpensive jersey or lacy knits with a separate apron over them. This enables them to have short or long sleeves as they wish and yet keep warmly dressed during the day at home.

Broader Life Made Possible By Engineers

Many Benefits Brought by Them to World, Trezise Points Out

Life today has been made broader, richer and fuller through the benefits brought to the world by the engineer, F. W. Trezise, associate professor of engineering at Lawrence college, declared in an address Tuesday noon at the weekly meeting of the Appleton Rotary club at Hotel Northern.

"The oldest definition of engineering, suggested in 1828 by Thomas Tredgold in England, still serves to define that field of endeavor, Trezise pointed out. His definition was: 'Engineering is the art of directing the great source of power in nature for the use and convenience of man.'

"Engineering is as old as civilization," Trezise said. The pyramid of Cheops in Egypt, the temples of Karnak and Luxor at Thebes, represent the solution of problems which it is difficult to realize. Jerusalem, Athens and Rome have supplies of water brought from distant hills by aqueducts before the Christian era. The Roman aqueducts in the valley of the Rhone river in France now stand as memorials to the high character of early engineering achievements. The Roman roadbeds in continental Europe and England still serve the traffic needs of modern life. The architecture of the middle ages preserved in the construction of cathedrals, are engineering as well as architectural masterpieces."

Helped Make Empires

Mr. Trezise said the canal-building period represented achievements which have made empires and altered the course of national growth. He mentioned the Erie canal, the Suez canal, the Kiel canal, the Soo canal and the Corinth canal in Greece. Transcontinental railroads, tunnels through the Alps and the Andes, Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals projects, all briefly form an incomplete abstract where the directing of the great sources of power in nature has been accomplished for the use and convenience of man.

The speaker scored the modern movie for its representation of pictures in which the engineer is made out a hero in a spotless khaki uniform, always handsome and young, who wins the hand of the great financier's daughter. The movies, however, do serve to bring to the front the romance in this field, he said.

Entrance of the aesthetic factor in the field of engineering has resulted in a greater contribution to the modern world, Mr. Trezise pointed out. Beautiful office buildings and factories have resulted. The European bridges over the Seine, the Rhine and the Rhone have been equalled in beauty by the graceful steel curves of the Hell Gate steel arch, the Washington Memorial bridge over the Hudson and the stupendous suspension over the harbor of San Francisco.

"Not only the modern office building, the combined product of architectural and engineering skill, become the criterion of beauty, but the barrenness of factory buildings has taken on an individuality and aesthetic note of inspiration which must find a place in the lives of the employees," he said.

Result in Valley

"We have in the past few years found this characteristic development in the Fox river valley. The factories, mill buildings and power houses, recently built, have combined beauty with utility in most artistic proportions. Large corporations have laid out parks and model cities."

Mr. Trezise showed how engineering skill has resulted in the building of roads, thus knitting closer urban and rural life; how the automobile has been developed.

Girl Reserve Group Admits Class of 13

Thirteen Appleton high school girls were initiated into The Girl Reserve association at a dinner at Hotel Northern Tuesday evening. Miss Marjorie Meyer, president and Miss Helen Cohen, vice president, were in charge of the ceremony. Seniors initiated were the Misses Joan Peotter, Olive Werner, Maxine Gillis, Beatrice Bosser, Leone Diny, Joyce Carter, and Margaret Pfeiffer. Juniors were the Misses Virginia Meidam, Grace Bitter, Marjorie Jane Mrchow, Betty Nolan, Marion Schultz and Marion Scheil.

ed, along with other forms of transportation, to knit the world closer together; and how roadbeds are being beautified by the planting of shrubbery, trees and flowers and the removal of billboards.

Engineering has furthered the cause of humanism, he pointed out, by helping to carry out the prophecy of the Holy Writ: "When swords will be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning-hooks." He said nitroglycerine and gun cotton had been transformed into delicate articles of jewelry and pyralin colorful quick-drying lacquers and finishes that never were thought possible. As an example he pointed to Muscle Shoals, built primarily for the making of war materials, which is now one of the largest plants for the manufacture of commercial fertilizers.

The achievements of the engineer Mr. Trezise pointed to the telegraph, the telephone, the radio which also serve to draw the world closer together.

"The masses have more to hope for from great engineers and great industrial statesmen than from social reformers," Mr. Trezise declared. "The engineer is engaged in a war of human liberation, to make available for the masses the comforts and conveniences that are now the exclusive privilege of millionaires."

Mr. Trezise lauded the schools of technology of today which are stressing the cultural as well as the technical training of engineers. He said this would lead to the bringing of even greater advantages and benefits to the world. He told of the steps being taken by the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education to coordinate engineering education, the better to study the problems of adapting the present educational curricula to the future responsibilities of the profession.

No blame can be attached to the engineering profession for the depression, Mr. Trezise pointed out. According to Stuart Chase, the engineer, at the bidding of the master of finance, built the modern world. Had the engineer followed his own philosophy of life, that of building, and not allowed himself to be subjected to the yolk of profit-taking, the crisis would have been averted, in a large measure at least. However, at the present moment, the engineering profession makes up the largest rank of the unemployed skilled labor.

"The engineers' contribution to the culture of today is the gradual decreasing of the hours of labor for the employed," he said. "The alleviation of drudgery and the raising of the standards of living. The responsibility of the engineer ceases when he gives civilization the opportunity for widening cultural horizons during the greater leisure hours. Civilization must use thus leisure to advance its cultural and spiritual growth if we are to maintain our supremacy and accept the torch from those who have gone before."

Claflin to Hunt for Ducks on Lake Poygan

BY BERT CLAFLIN

During the coming two weeks I expect to accept invitations which I have received to visit the owners of three different hunting lodges for a try at the canvasbacks. One of these is located on Lake Puckaway, one on Fox Lake and the other on Lake Poygan.

CLAFLIN

Though the ducks are by no means as plentiful as it was thought they would be on Green Bay, the number on that water is perhaps no criterion of the actual flight this year; though, the birds generally first visit the latter feeding grounds before they proceed southward to the inland lakes.

I am inclined to think that when the final analysis is made it will be found that the southbound waterfowl are not much more plentiful than they were last season, even though breeding conditions, according to reports received from Saskatchewan and Alberta, were far better. However, Lakes Poygan, Fox and Puckaway are noted for being favorite stopping places for canvasbacks, and so I will know more about conditions after I return from my trips to those shooting grounds, at which time I shall have some interesting stories for my readers.

Squirrel Season Open

The squirrel season has now been open two days. I have been invited to spend a couple of days in the region north of New London, Roy-alton and Northport which I hope to do the latter part of this week. The country I mention is a fine one for the greys and fox varieties, because of the abundance of shell-barks.

The squirrel is a cute animal and not easily bagged, particularly if one is hunting alone. When that occurs, and you tree one of the animals and watch him ensconce himself on the opposite side of a limb from you and well up toward the top of the tree, here is a simple ruse which I have employed to get a shot at him: I simply remove my hat, place it on a bush near the root of the tree, and then walk slowly around to the other side.

In the meantime Mr. Squirrel remains where he can watch the hat swinging on the bush. He forgets or ignores the hunter until it is too late and a shot brings him to the ground. If two of you are hunting together and the above occurs, if one of you walk to the opposite side it will have the same effect on the cunning animal as did the hat.

And when it comes to eating it is difficult to beat the grey or fox squirrel. A good way to prepare them is first to parboil the meat until tender and then bread and fry the same as is done with veal or chicken.

Would Bar Firm From Insurance Sales in State

Industrial Commission Says Concern Not Licensed to Sell Job Insurance

Madison —(P)— State Insurance Commissioner H. J. Mortensen was requested by the industrial commission Tuesday to take legal action against the Metropolitan Employment Assurance Bureau, Inc., of Racine, on the charge that it is selling unemployment insurance in Wisconsin without license to do business.

The industrial commission said that while employers are permitted under the new state unemployment compensation act to band themselves together to meet the requirements of the law they are specifically prohibited from insuring their liability in any insurance company.

The contract of the Racine firm, the commission stated, will not exempt employers from the provisions of the unemployment compensation act.

G. S. Paine, secretary of the Racine company, which was organized last summer has denied that the company is subject to regulation by the industrial or insurance departments or is violating any state laws.

A copy of the company's contract, presented to Mortensen shows that the firm retains 30 per cent. of paid premiums for overhead expense and profits. The industrial commission contended that there is no obligation on the promoters to invest their own money to protect subscribers against loss and that the contract does not provide sound or adequate insurance against unemployment.

"Though conducting what is generally recognized as an unemployment insurance business, this company is not licensed by the insurance department, has no legal authority to do an insurance business of any kind and is therefore operating in direct violation of the state's insurance laws," the commission wrote Mortensen.

"It follows that the insurance department, which is charged with protection of the public through enforcement of the insurance laws, should initiate legal action against the Metropolitan Employment Assurance Bureau, Inc., to effect dissolution of the company or to enjoin it from further violation of the statutes. The industrial commission stands ready to cooperate with your department in any way it can."

The industrial commission said it appears that actual sales of the company's contract have been made and that its agents employed in various parts of the state are continuing actively to solicit such business.

Build Bridge Across Lake, Council Told

Proposal, Suggested by MacGillan, Referred To Committee

Menasha—The proposed construction of a bridge across Little Lake Butte des Moris, to connect Menasha with farming communities on the other side of the lake, was received by Alderman T. E. McGillan at a meeting of the common council Tuesday evening.

McGillan pointed out that Menasha is isolated and that residents of rural communities transact their business in nearby cities to which they have easier access. On the occasion when construction of the bridge was first proposed it was not considered the opportune time, but with the governmental public works program in progress, Menasha should derive some benefit. Now is the proper time, he contended, to make advances on the matter to not only the citizens of the city but to officials of the county, state and federal governments.

The proposal met with the approval of the aldermen and the finance committee, headed by Alderman McGillan, was authorized to go into the matter with federal, state and county officials and to report at intervals on the progress being made.

No Action on Wall

The matter of a retaining wall on Water-st. adjacent to the government canal was the center of some discussion. Mayor N. G. Remmel revealed that the government has offered no immediate action and City Attorney Crowley was ordered to continue attempts to secure a favorable decision on the project.

The bid of the Menasha Building and Supply company, offering to furnish the city 100 or more cords of mixed maple and birch wood in four-foot lengths at $7 per foot cord, to unload the wood at 50 cents a cord, to deliver it at 150 cents a cord, and to provide storage space free of charge was accepted by the council. The wood will be used largely for distribution as fuel for needy families.

The bid was one of six received and following its acceptance, the council decided that to those who are in need of fuel, the wood will be delivered in four-foot lengths. It will be cut to usable lengths for families unable to do the work.

Action Protested

The council's action was protested, however, by George Gibson of Neenah, one of the bidders. Gibson contended that the advertisement for bids provided for solid maple wood and that the council had acted to purchase wood that was not solid maple. Gibson contended that the advertisement provided for solid maple and questioning the legality of favorable action on the other proposal he threatened to sue the city. The council adjourned before any further decisions on the question were made, but the matter was discussed by several groups during the meeting.

The 1933 park board budget, providing for a reduction of about $1,800 from last year, was referred to the committee of the whole with the finance committee to bring in a report. The previous budget provided for a one mill tax and an additional $1,000 for the operation of the municipal bathing beach, but in the new budget the additional $1,000 will be eliminated and reductions in assessed valuation will reduce the mill tax income about $300 more.

The petition of Herman Schreiter for a license to operate a soft drink parlor at 156 Main-st., was granted on conditions which included surrendering the license granted to the present operator, A. E. Stork.

The financial report of St. 31 revealed a general fund deficit of $13,323.22 and Alderman McGillan, finance committee chairman, pointed out that at the same time a year ago the deficit was $40,283.97.

The monthly report of the poor committee revealed expenditures totaling $1,573.43, of which $335.40 was for county charges. More than $1,700 was credited back to the poor department from employment relief work done and for cash refunds totaling $2,580.

A petition to hang a sign over the sidewalk, submitted by V. Keller of Val's Beauty Salon, was granted.

Legion Ready for Clothing Drive

Veterans Also Seek Toys For Distribution During Holidays

Menasha—The American Legion's annual drive for clothing and toys, to be distributed to needy families at Christmas time, will open Thursday when a canvass of the city is made by Menasha boys scouts. Trucks will call at the homes listed in the boy scout canvass Saturday.

The use of city trucks in collecting the contributions was authorized by the common council Tuesday evening and all articles collected will be brought to the library. Distribution will be directed by Red Cross officials and the Legion auxiliary.

As many toys as possible will be sought and those in need of repairs or repainting will be brought to the workshop of the Menasha fire department.

Manufactured Ice Is Delivered in Menasha

Menasha—Delivery of manufactured ice in Menasha has been established by R. L. Pankratz, in conjunction with his fuel business. Pankratz is associated in the enterprise with Alderman Henry Knoke, who is in active charge of the delivery service. Ice for the new delivery here is manufactured in Appleton.

Lights Match to Look at Gas Tank; Gets Away With It

Menasha—R. F. Schrage, Third-st., lit a match to see how much gasoline the tank on his car contained shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday evening and got away with it. Although an explosion occurred, the gas ignited and the Menasha fire department was called. The blaze was extinguished with little difficulty and caused no damage, Paul Theimer, fire department chief, reported.

Commission Seeks More Policemen

Council to Consider Request at Special Meeting Friday Night

Menasha—The matter of additional police in Menasha, revived by the fire and police commission in a recommendation to the common council here Tuesday evening, will be considered by the aldermen, meeting as a committee of the whole, Friday evening.

The commission's recommendation, presented by Otto Kloppe, secretary, pointed to the need for additional men and urged immediate action. In referring the matter to the committee of the whole, Mayor N. G. Remmel spoke at some length in favor of the proposal.

Stating that it is a fact that the city has not enough men on its police force, Mayor Remmel urged serious consideration of the recommendation by the committee. Although the administration is working to cut costs, these are unusual times and people must be given adequate protection, the mayor asserted.

Proposed Before

Additional men on the police force has been proposed on several occasions during the past year, and on one occasion a petition signed by over 500 people was presented to the council. Examination of candidates was conducted by the commission, but selection of additional police was delayed.

Another matter to be considered by the committee of the whole at Friday's meeting will be the proposed construction of an alley in the 200 block on the north side of Main-st. Reporting for the board of public works at Tuesday's council session, Mayor Remmel stated that the survey of the proposed alley had been completed but suggested that further action be delayed until next spring.

Menasha Society

Menasha—A class of 23 Winnebago candidates as well as a local group will be initiated at a meeting of Twin City-Odd Fellows in the lodge rooms here Wednesday evening. Visitors from Appleton, Green Bay and Seymour also are expected.

The Winnebago-co council of American Legion auxiliaries was to meet in the library auditorium here Wednesday afternoon with members of the auxiliary to Henry J. Lenz post as hostesses. Delegations from the Omro, Oshkosh, Neenah and Menasha posts were expected to attend and election of a county president was planned.

Ladies society of the Congregational church met in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon. A regular monthly business session was planned.

Germania Benevolent society will entertain at the first of a series of card parties in Germania hall Sunday afternoon. Refreshments will be served.

Women's Catholic Order of Foresters, St. Patrick's parish, met in St. Patrick's school hall Tuesday evening. A social program followed the business session.

Menasha links will meet in their lodge rooms Wednesday evening. A regular bi-monthly business session is planned.

A card party, sponsored by Christian Mothers of St. Mary's parish, was under way in St. Mary's school hall Wednesday afternoon and will continue Wednesday evening. Refreshments will be served.

Mrs. John Block will entertain the Third Ward Royal Neighbor club at her home on Fourth-st. Thursday evening. Cards will be played.

Hendy Sets Pace for Germania Bowlers

Menasha—Topping 620 pins in three games, C. A. Hendy led Germania Goodfellowship league bowling on Monday allays Tuesday evening. Hendy, anchor man for the Voissem Electric, chalked up single games of 234, 206 and 180 while his team took two out of three games from the Yankee Papers.

The Laemmrich Funeral home quint took two out of three games from the Seithamer Grocers and the Held Electric dropped a pair to the Floral Center team.

In American Legion league competition R. Moon of the Doughnuts took high single game honors with a 221 count while his team won two out of three games from the Ammunition Train. The Red Legs were defeated two out of three tilts by the Supply Train trio.

Tuchscherer Leader Of Dramatic Club

Menasha—Konrad Tuchscherer has been named president of the St. Mary High school dramatic club. Mildred Hiron is vice president; H. Krautramer, secretary, and Vincent Besta, treasurer.

The club has started work on two one-act plays which will be presented this month under the direction of Mrs. F. Theodore Cloak.

Cold tea is said to be a much more effective dressing for burns than any kind of oil.

Council Adopts New Measure on Auction Sales

Permit Must be Secured From Mayor, With Certain Exceptions

Menasha—A new ordinance governing auction sales, in Menasha, designed to protect both dealers and citizens, was adopted by the common council here Tuesday evening.

The ordinance provides that a permit for the auction be obtained from the mayor, excepting sales made under authority of law and in a few other specified cases, and that the mayor not issue a permit until an inventory of the stock to be sold, detailed as to article and price, has been submitted and until he is satisfied that no fraud or deception is contemplated.

The mayor will cause the sealer of weights and measures to investigate and verify the inventories. The inventory must be filed 60 days prior to the granting of the permit, excepting circumstances, and the permit will include a definite time limit.

$25 License Fee

Before a permit is issued the applicant must pay a $25 license fee and in addition to the fee, there shall be paid to the city 10 per cent of the gross receipts accruing from the sale excepting auctions of used household goods and sales under court orders and similar circumstances. A daily accounting must be made to the city treasurer and the owner and auctioneer are jointly and separately liable for failure to comply with the ordinance.

The mayor will inform the council of action on permits and applicants may file an appeal to the council. The mayor is vested with authority to suspend the sale if he believes the ordinance is being violated and may also appoint an inspector. The ordinance also provides that merchandise be truthfully described that "boosters" are forbidden, and that no stock shall be added for the purpose of the auction.

No permits are required, however, for the sale of any wagon, car, carriage, automobile, truck, mechanics tools, used farm implements, live stock, including game and poultry, vegetables, fruits, melons, berries, flowers, or the sale of used household furniture and effects when made by an individual citizen and not a dealer, nor for the sale of real estate located in the city.

Complete Program For Armistice Day

Ceremony to be Conducted Preceding Neenah-Menasha Grid Game

Menasha—The complete program for the Armistice day program preceding the Neenah-Menasha high school football game at Butte des Moris field on the evening of Nov. 11 has been announced by officials in charge.

The Menasha Legion color bearers and members, Mayor N. G. Remmel and the Menasha high school band will meet on the north west corner of the athletic field at 7:30 with the Neenah Legion color bearers and members, Mayor George E. Sande, and the Neenah high school band in the southwest corner.

At 7:45 each group will march down their own side of the field to the east end, color bearers of the Legion post and the two bands will join, the two mayors will shake hands and extend greetings, and all will march west down the center of the field in mass formation. Halting at the end of the field the two bands will play and the audience will sing the first and last verses of the "Star Spangled Banner." A search light will illuminate a flag on the school building and a bomb salute will conclude the program.

Building Activity Light in Menasha

Menasha—Building permits for construction work estimated at $8,400 were issued in Menasha during October by Paul Theimer, building inspector. The permits provide for three new dwellings, five garages, one addition, and one enclosed porch.

Permission to construct a dwelling on Oak-st. for $3,500 was granted to Mrs. M. Kellner and similar permits were issued to Louis Slomski, Racine-st., $2,700; and to Napoleon Landau, 217 Lawson-st., $1,500.

Garage construction permits were issued to John Kuntz, Seventh-st., $50; Frank Wippich, 715 Appleton-st., $50; Menasha Lumber and Fuel company, 54 Seventh-st., $100; Joseph Lewandowski, Seventh-st., $125; and J. C. Sarton, Lawson-st., dwelling and garage for $500.

Other permits were issued to John J. Sensenbrenner, 240 Kaukauna-st., addition, $75; and A. Ulrich, Main-st., enclosed porch, $500.

Don't Give Cash for Jobless Slips, Warning

Menasha—Menasha merchants who pay all or part cash to holders of Menasha blue unemployment slips will receive no more business through the city poor department, according to a statement issued by John Sensenbrenner, superintendent of poor. According to reports, Sensenbrenner stated, a number of men employed on relief work at the city park have been in the habit of turning in their blue slips to local merchants and receiving in exchange their merchandise and part cash.

City to Install Lights On North Side of Street

Menasha—Installation of an ornamental lighting system on the entire north side of Nicolet-blvd. was approved by the common council Tuesday evening. The project was endorsed by the water and light commission in a recommendation to the council, and the entire expense of installation will be borne by the water and light department.

About 35 lights will be installed on the Menasha side of the boulevard, the recommendation indicated. The water and light commission's action in refunding to the general fund $7,750.22 expended by the city in installing the Main-st. ornamental lighting system also met with aldermanic approval, and Mayor Remmel stated that the commission should be commended highly for its able operation of the municipal utility plant.

Referring to the Nicolet-blvd. lighting, Mayor Remmel explained that officials of Menasha and Neenah had conferred on several occasions in an effort to outline an arrangement for maintenance of the boulevard lighting at equal cost to the two communities, but that because of Neenah's contract with the Wisconsin Michigan Power company, favorable action on the plan was impossible, Menasha, he stated, has paid a greater share of the expense for several years and although the city has no quarrel with Neenah, the present plan is feasible and fair.

Another action taken by the council provides that all poles in the city owned by the Wisconsin Michigan Power company or other power companies not in use for a period of 30 days shall be removed.

A suggestion by Alderman Grade that a light be installed on the outside of the fifth ward school for the convenience of voters also was approved.

Kellnhauser High in Elk Bowling League

Menasha—R. Kellnhauser, anchor man for the Blue Bulls, set the pace for Elks' league bowlers on Monday evening when he applied 14 pins in three games with individual counts of 228, 222 and 226. His team took two out of three games from the Fairbach Agency.

H. Duerrwaechter's 659 series with single games of 217, 185 and 257 helped the Buck Tails to wins in three straight games with the Gilbert Papers, while the One Four One team took a pair from the Menasha Record, the Legionaires won two from the Haugh Drugs and the First National banks won the old game from the Thrifty Five.

The Rev. Courtenay Talks to Republicans

Neenah—A talk on political consciousness, by the Rev. W. R. Courtenay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, featured a meeting of the Neenah Republican club in the community room of the National Manufacturers bank building Tuesday evening.

Reports by committees on the general republican attitude through out the district were given and one of the voting machines which will be on trial in the general elections here next week was demonstrated.

DeMolay Basketeers Open Practice Sessions

Neenah—Winnebago Chapter DeMolay basketball players started practice Tuesday evening. The annual DeMolay state basketball tournament is scheduled for Neenah during the early part of March. The local chapter, composed of Neenah and Menasha young men, has a large group of former high school players from which to select a team. The squad will practice each Tuesday evening at Roosevelt school gymnasium under direction of Coach George Christoph. It is expected there will be more than 15 teams from all parts of the State entered in the tournament, which will be held either in the new high school or the Roosevelt school gymnasium.

High School Eleven Gets Rest for Week

Neenah—The high school football squad will take a rest this week, according to orders issued by Coach Ole Jorgenson. School was scheduled to close this afternoon to allow the teachers to attend the annual state teachers' meeting at Milwaukee. Practice will be resumed Monday afternoon for the Menasha game on the evening of Nov. 11 at Menasha.

Neenah Personals

Neenah—Mrs. George Dix, Sr., E. Forest-ave., has been admitted to Theda Clark hospital for treatment.

PLAN OVERNIGHT HIKE

Menasha—Plans for an overnight hike next weekend will be completed at a meeting of Troop 15, St. Patrick's boy scouts, Thursday evening. The meeting was originally scheduled for Tuesday.

All Saints' Day Is Observed by Churches

Menasha—All Saints Day, a holy day of obligation in the Catholic church, was observed with special services in St. John, St. Mary, and St. Patrick Catholic churches here Tuesday. Special masses also were held Wednesday in observance of All Soul's Day.

Drug Addict Breaks Into Fourth Office

Neenah—That the office of Dr. T. J. Sellar, dentist, 104 W. Wisconsin-ave., also was entered by a marauder Monday evening was reported to Neenah police Tuesday afternoon. Entry apparently was made by picking the lock on the office door, but nothing of value was taken, police were told.

Four offices were entered by a thief Monday. In addition to Dr. Sellar's, the offices of Dr. G. N. Pratt and Dr. Henry Ott, physicians, and of Dr. L. J. McCrary, dentist were raided. Because the loot at Dr. Ott's office included some morphine, police believe the thefts were committed by a drug addict.

Report Sanatorium Free of All Debt

No Appropriations to be Asked From Counties This Year

Neenah—That Sunnyview Sanatorium is free of debt and that it will ask no 1933 appropriation from either Winnebago or Fond du Lac was revealed at a joint meeting of the committees from both counties and the medical staff at the sanatorium Tuesday evening.

In the review of the institution's work during the past year, presented after a 6:30 dinner, it was stated that the sanatorium is now the fourth largest of its kind in the state.

During the past year the new children's addition was completed, the old dining room was converted into an office and lounge room and the old office has been remodeled into a main dining room and nurses dining room.

People Demand Brand New Deal, Duffy Declares

Candidate for U. S. Senate Scores 'Gas Attack' Of Republicans

Neenah—“The people of Wisconsin and the citizens of our nation are demanding a new deal,” F. Ryan Duffy of Fond du Lac, Democratic nominee for the United States Senate, told a Neenah audience in a campaign address in the Embassy theatre here Tuesday afternoon.

“Governor Roosevelt will be the next president of the United States unless the ‘gas attack’ which has been unleashed by our Republican friends can sway our people in the last week of this campaign,” he said. “It happens that if the Republicans were able to get even a majority of one in each of 13 states that even though the other 35 states were unanimously for Roosevelt, the Republicans could carry the election. It is natural strategy, therefore, for them to concentrate upon these 13 states, one of which is Wisconsin.”

“There have been in the past, and I suppose there always will be certain interests in this country that seek to obtain special privileges and consideration from our government that are not afforded to the average run of our citizens. They do not wish for Democratic success.”

Scores Tax Policy

“The Republican treasury department has adopted an unusually liberal attitude in the refund of taxes, and in particular with reference to the taxes which the Democrats collected from 1917 to 1921, but what is more important is that the man who was executive director of the Hoover campaign in 1928 was afterwards put at the head of that bureau of the treasury department which has the entire say as to these large tax refunds. Therefore, when Harvey Firestone joins his voice to that of the chorus that is trying to intimidate our people through a propaganda of fear, it is well to know that while he contributed $25,000 to the Hoover fund four years ago, that he also received tax refunds from the treasury department amounting to $2,980,000.”

Listing other tax refunds, Duffy said that while some of the refunds were justifiable, there seems to have been too close a working understanding between the contributors to the Hoover fund, who received large tax refunds and who are now trying to intimidate the American people.

“The October bulletin of the National City Bank brushes aside the idea that Democratic success in the election would have any injurious effect on the country and Roger Babson, the great financial expert, predicts that if Roosevelt is elected good bonds will continue to go higher,” he said. “There is no basis for the campaign of fear.”

Retail Sales
Increase as Prices RiseWholesalers and Retailers Reporting Larger Sale Volume

Volume of purchases in retail stores in the middle west is definitely on the increase, business survey agencies report. Encouraged by improvement in security and commodity prices, consumers have started to buy in increased volume and in many cities definite increases are being reported.

Fall buying by retailers has been better than seasonal, wholesalers are saying. Merchants rapidly are reaching the conclusion that prices have dropped to their lowest levels and they are beginning to stock up their stores again. Retail buying was a little slower but as the consumer saw prices stiffen he began to get in the market and an improvement all around has been noted.

Indicative of the improvement in business are the reports for this week issued by Bradstreet's and R. G. Dun and Co.

"Current wholesale dry goods activity continues in excess of last year, with no signs of a tapering off from the recent 'high levels,'" Dun reports.

"Merchandise specific reports on business for September and earlier show some rather startling gains over last year."

More Dresses Sold
"Sales of one wholesale dress house during August and September more than doubled the 1931 totals, while sales for the first nine months were in excess of the entire business last year."

"A check on sales of tenants in a large merchandising headquarters building placed sales for August and September at 10 per cent ahead. Textile demand continues exceedingly active and orders are more and more deferred."

"Sales of low priced household utilities by electrical supply jobbers to retailers have improved, according to Dun's."

Call For Steel Improves
On the subject of steel the report says:

"Structural steel demand continued fairly active, with 5,000 tons involved in three recently announced highway bridge projects. Recent awards involved 2,410 tons. Railroad buying has been a little more active but is still sharply subnormal. Automotive companies are taking a fairly steady tonnage."

"As the steel mills, the railroads, and the heavy manufacturing industries gain more business their pay rolls go up and the increased purchasing power begins to be felt by merchants."

Better Business Noted
Bradstreet's weekly survey says: "Reports covering all lines of manufacturing, wholesale and retail, are satisfactory to all interests, and more of the same, but on the whole they are 'average'."

"Sentiment continues to grow more optimistic. There is an increasing disposition to forge ahead. Labor is being employed more generally and a more moderate increase in the number and size of pay rolls is becoming a feature. Wholesalers of dry goods had another good week, with sales holding up close to the recent gains. Retail business is also making a good showing in seasonal lines."

Complaints of mild weather restricting larger buying of heavy winter goods is reported to be apparent. Lower temperatures, merchants say, would cause increased distribution of heavy clothing, underwear, blankets and hosiery."

All in all, sales by jobbers and retailers are estimated to be running a little above last year's levels. Considering the lower rate at which industry in general is operating this year, this improvement in merchandise lines is considered significant. It is not impossible the merchant is leading the way to better times for the manufacturer, the raw materials producer, and the railroad."

Car loadings have been improving at better than seasonal rates for several weeks. Steel operations are gradually gaining a little. And electric power consumption, usually regarded as the most accurate index of business, has been following a better trend."

Consuming power of the vast population or farms has grown considerably since last June.

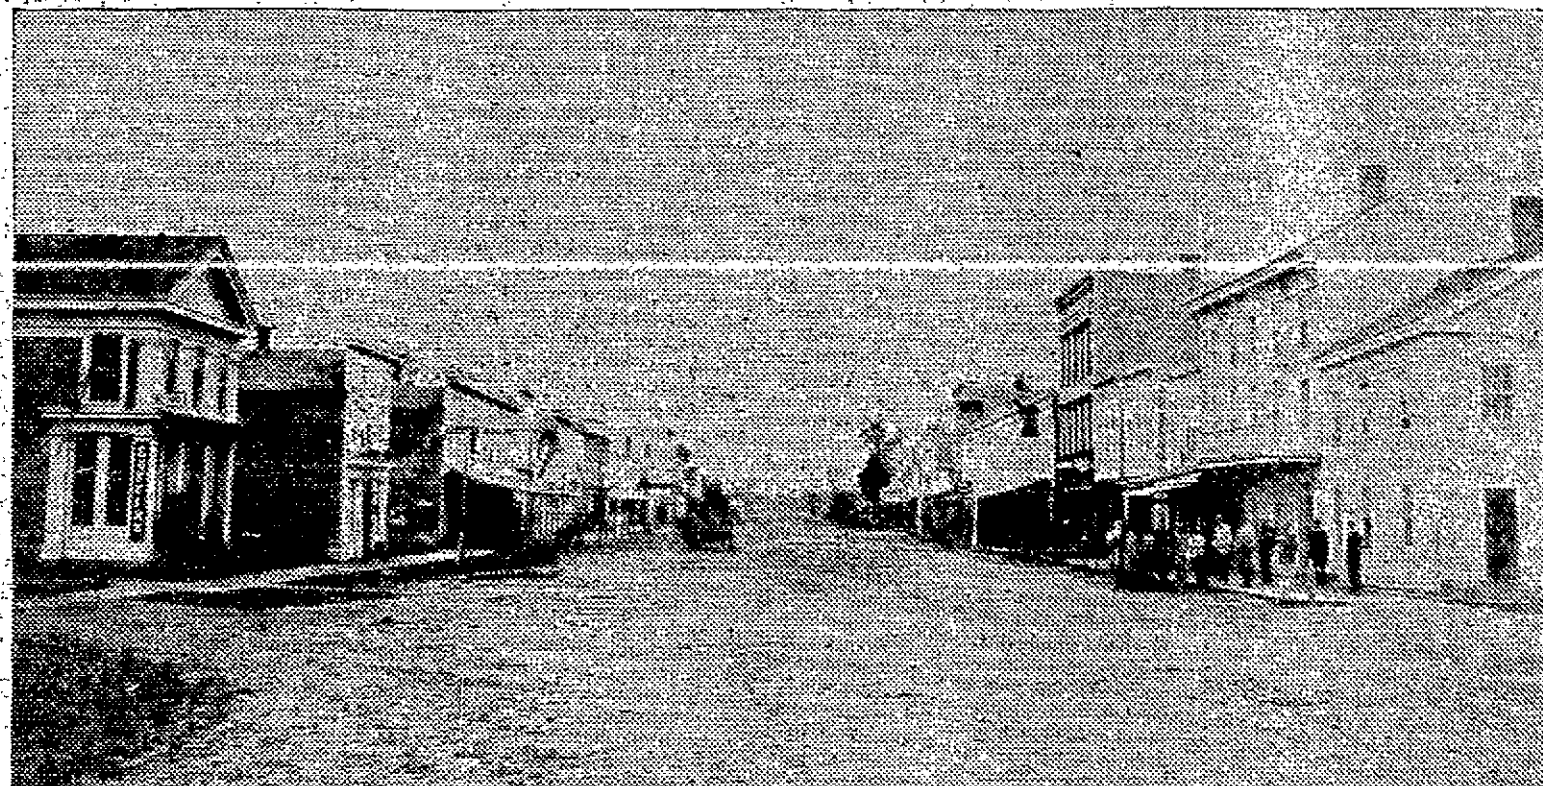

August Gains On Farms
The United States department of labor at Washington has just issued its report on wholesale price statistics for August, showing that prices for farm products in that month registered the largest gain of any individual commodity class.

Increases were recorded during August in prices of barley, corn, rye, wheat, calves, poultry, cotton eggs, hay and beans, while decreases were reported for prices of oats, cows, hogs, fresh apples, lemons and oranges, leaf tobacco and onions.

Stores Carry Fancy Jars
To Hold Cookie Supply

Perhaps you haven't noticed, but even the trend toward yesterday has hit the kitchen. In spite of the new fangled contraptions at which poor grandmother would gaze with amazement from her picture of combination wood and coal stove, heavy black flat iron and scrubbing board days, the same old cookie jar is still an important fixture. These you'll find all over town in various colors and shapes, ranging from deep black ones brightly patterned with autumn flowers to plain pottery ones with a small round cover. None are expensive, but they're an attraction and really the best place in the world to keep your cookies fresh and crisp.

Shopping Center for Three Quarters of a Century

For more than seventy-five years College avenue has been the shopping center for the thrifty and industrious people who populate the Fox river valley. The three pictures here show three stages in the long history of this street. At the top is College avenue as it appeared about the time Appleton became a city 75 years ago; in the center is College avenue of 1897 and at the bottom is the hustling and bustling and modern street of today.

But Appleton no longer is a one street town and shoppers will find many an interesting item during the Fall Festival in the stores and shops on Appleton, Superior, Oneida, Morrison and Durkee streets, which, with College avenue, make up the city's great shopping area.

Hostess Pajamas
In Many ColorsRiot of Color in Display of Pajamas for Afternoon Wear

The spirit of elegance has taken to new fields in a most feminine manner. Those of leisure hours when it is said smart women really dress up the most.

When Milady is entertaining informally for an afternoon at contract she dons her most gorgeous hostess pajamas or tea time robes, which certainly may be termed glad rags in the nth degree.

Velveteen and corduroys are the lowliest with luxurious hostess affairs fashioned of dull, transparent or chiffon velvet. Imagine the beauty, if you will, of the leading shades that are certain to make any hostess glow, peppermint green, bronzon green, cherry, the ever favorite and perfect black.

Orion, this new "open shade of blue, rubytone and the soft depths of pansy."

The colors alone would make you wilt without the gorgeous sleeves that are amazing. Designers must have worked way into the candlelight hours to bring out the grace and beauty of the lines.

The one piece corduroy pajamas boast smart buttons down the front at one place and stress glowing colors. The flannel robes this year have brought out the beauty of ombre colorings. Some are very plain, while others, grand for college dormitory life, speak for themselves in their daring color combinations.

Grandmother's Styles are Latest Fashions of Today

Shades of our great grandmother. That seems to be the proper slogan for the present hysteria for historical allure, brought out in this season's clothes.

Those who seized on the ostrich boa this past summer were starting in the right direction for the look back toward the gay nineties when grandmother was a rosy chequed lass, buxom, perhaps, but wasp waisted and broad shouldered. In the subtle spirit of gay caricature, dressmakers have been up to things, bringing the past back to the present. It all started with the huge, decidedly chic 1890 sleeves, originated, or better perhaps, revived by the Paris designer named Schiaparelli.

When you see them in gowns, evening frocks, coats and trim street dresses, don't hesitate about trying them on, they really are tricky affairs. They may look queerly bulky to you, but they are supposed to look big and buxom in the sleeve. How on earth else could an honest to goodness leg o' mutton sleeve look?

The Gibson Girl herself, done as only Dana pictured her, appears in the shop windows in such quaint, old fashionedness that is now new-fangledness. One shop especially presented a charming illustration of the movement back toward the nineties when family vehicles were spanking bays and a coach and four.

The black skirt is circular with an adorable small black and white checked silk blouse that suggests a pulled in waistline and certainly follows the high neck trend of the Victorian era. The sleeves are leg o' mutton and tight at the wrist. This is worn with a neat, sailor effect hat with its saucy shallow crown and fussy straight brim.

With this outfit is the coat that brings back grandmother's girlhood more than ever, a grey kimmer cape, elbow-length, with its little high collar and tiny muff.

Forty years ago, capes were being worn for coats, ruff effects fit about the neck with long dangling satin ribbons, and today both are doing the same ornamentation to the necks of handsome granddaughters.

In evening gowns the trend toward other days goes back even further in some models, with the flowing grace of mediaeval garb and Grecian costumes forming the ideas for modern adaptations.

It's just another proof that history repeats itself, even though the repetition seems more charming than the original.

Walking Dolls Sure to Go Big With Youngsters

The picture of a fat, jolly Santa Claus squeezing down a limited income chimney this year came to mind over the table of new, gorgeous baby dolls seen at one College avenue store. Then came the surprise, these baby-sized, unbreakable, and soft-bodied doll children cost very little, in spite of the natural tinted skin, gleaming teeth, tongue and lustrous eyelashes. Upon closer investigation it was discovered that rubber painted, bootied, bonneted and dressed make believe babies not only cry realistically but they walk.

Pile Everything
In Utility BoxesWood Contraptions Offered Here Have Many Uses in Home

When you have an extra corner but not enough wardrobe room for the little things that go with clothes and costumes, the problem is solved in these wooden contraptions called utility boxes.

They fit on closet shelves, in corners, make a complete dresser effect in the spare bedroom, or form a window seat. You see, they come in parts and all sorts of shaped boxes for all sorts of things can be combined to form a grouping, according to what your space needs are.

The outstanding points about them besides their usefulness, is that they are covered in color with a fabric that is washable. They come in shoe boxes, hankiechiefs and odd and ends boxes, glove trays over comfortable drawers, hat box sizes. When the various boxes are placed together they form a sort of effect.

If you need a place for shoes, a row of drawers in the shoe box fits beautifully under a window, with perhaps narrow boxes for hankies or gloves across the top. Since the boxes are wood constructed, they'd be strong enough for a window seat to actually sit on.

The colors are chintz and the pastel shades of green, orchid, rose, blue, with waste paper baskets to match if you are in a matching mood.

No amendment to the Constitution of the United States has ever been repealed.

Every Taste for Draperies Can be Satisfied HereAppleton Stores Ready to
Housekeepers

Whatever the period of furniture, whatever the treatment of a room, whether it be living room, dining room, sun room, kitchen, hall or nursery, the modern housewife will have little trouble finding just the right sort of new draperies in Appleton stores. You see, windows have never received so much attention before and now it has suddenly been found that draperies are the very thing that gives each room its final dash of personality.

If your room is already colorful, neutral curtains will carry out a certain subtle quietness that affords a pleasant background to your furniture. But so often it's the drapes that add colorful, new touch to old rooms and give furniture of a drab era a new life.

One thing is certain, womenfolk are becoming more fastidious about their curtains and realize that drab rooms are a mark on their souls as a clever homemaker. This is especially true in a place where gay chintzes and prints abound for such little money and hand blocked linens present such amazing possibilities for lovely rooms.

Soft silks, satins, damasks and brocades still hold sway in rooms of the more formal atmosphere and their fussiness depends entirely upon the degree of formality of the place.

Tartan, the crisp and lovely dream of a Sunday best dress, has been taken into the home as a popular decorator of windows. Women with and eyes for beauty catch its grace by clever ruffling, pleating and festooning.

Among the new notes in draperies is the growing tendency for plain and solid colored drapes, with white looming as a ultra modern color, which gives the decorator a free reign to bring out fresh effects against the background. For those finding white too garish, creamy fabrics fit in nicely.

Ashes of roses is a new color in one shop that is used in taffeta hangings. This would be effective combined with a deeper shade and perhaps a metal colored tie back in a woman's room.

Almost any combination of color can be achieved, according to the color scheme of the rooms. In bedrooms the shades range from the deep yellow shade of citron to the blues and red wine tones. Raspberry shades and soft gold and browns are also effective in taffeta drapes.

Satin hung windows that reflect back toward other days catches the theme of Victorianism perhaps in a room of music and firelight. Lovely creamy drapes, softly hung and caught back with a Victorian green would reflect the light and dark shadows of a room like this.

Like gowns, colors in drapes come and go with the seasons. Ashes of roses in taffeta for instance, new blues, especially the greenish blues, are forming luscious backgrounds to brocades.

Hints on comely drapes picked up around town include this new

Garters and Suspenders

This famous two-way stretch achieved for women has its parallel in men's clothing, it's found, only not so much has been said about it. You'll find lattice back braces, more familiarly known as suspenders, that are newly made to give the man who wears 'em a good healthy stretch in any direction. It's all done with little leather badgets that fit in the middle where the straps cross in back, and at the tip of each strap.

Besides these, an amazing thing was shown in one of the stores a salesman in a man's shop casually picked up a man's garter and stretched it around his waist. Nothing remarkable to it, he explained, it's just the way a new sort of garter is supposed to have stretchiness and longer wear, meaning of course that no longer does the well dressed gent have to go around practicing he's a college boy with flopping socks.

Birds Will be Happy
In These New Cages

Masterlinck's bluebird couldn't find a happier or more elaborate home than some of the newly designed bird cages seen in town. Swinging apartments for feathered friends simulate the poetic reed cages long sung in poetry with a shining nickel shaft, a swank glassed in bird bath that looks like an indoor fountain. Perches are thick, soft wood, with a swinging circle at the top of the cage and comfortable perches in the lower parts of the house for eating and sleeping purposes. Not content with all these modern improvements on bird cages, the bottom of the cage has a wide band of filigree work in gold color and the bottom of the cage slips easily out to enable the housekeeping to clean up swiftly.

pebble cloth satin for living room and dining room drapes. It's very effective, this nubby cloth with a sheen to it. Then there's the fascinating Ramona gauze for under panels or the colorful stuff, exactly the right thing for an informal apartment. An open mesh barring, with quite large holes if you please that remind one of open waffle cloth, combines huge squares of bright reds, greens oranges and salmons with browns and yellows. The same stuff comes in plain for panels too.

Pearly dotted swisses are still grand for bedroom curtains, especially if they are fluffily ruffled and feminine. For a man's room rather plain drapes would be effective with the tone picking up a shade in an India print hung over the bed as a variation from bedroom pictures. A child's room needs delicate shades, made with damask or some of these clever, anise, draperies that youngsters adore.

Swisses in dots and figures are used for halls, bathrooms and kitchens as well as bedrooms. However one of the cleverest curtains ever seen for a kitchen is conventionally designed with cups and saucers.

Panel are used in very fine velvet brocades and damasks as well prints. These look well in hallways, over buffets in dining rooms and in bedrooms.

Oxford Still Favored For Daytime WearThis Year's Shoes Will Harmonize With Any Costume

Unlike the dress mode, which exemplifies the spirit of the gay nineties, shoes have a thoroughly ultra-modern look about them, but they are so gorgeously fashioned this year that they would harmonize with any period costume.

What is more, shoe styles have no distinct trend, they are as diversified as the very weather they are to be worn in, including oxford, pump, strap slipper, round toed evening shoes, and narrow afternoon novelty slippers. Although brown and black lead the smart colors, simply because they are in front in the costume field as well, you'll find blues, burgundy, reds and greens in Appleton shops.

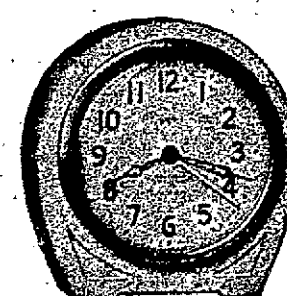

For tailored street wear with swagger wooleens and rough tweed suits the sturdy oxford is the favorite. This year oxfords mean more than they sound, for an oxford may be found in suede, kid, or a heavy calf, and many women have taken to the open laced oxford shoe. You'll also find that oxfords need not be flat, ugly shoes of 10 years ago, not with such smart looking street oxfords as the 112 ard trims being shown throughout the town.

Patent leather has its place in the world for afternoon wear, which sponsors suede and soft calfskin also. One unusual shoe which has all sorts of possibilities is a perforated daytime shoe with a gleaming plain toe and heel. It is called Cabana and comes in black patent leather, suede and calf. Two colors include brown, deep burgundy, dark blue, blonde and even white. Another interesting afternoon effect is a suede slipper trimmed with a fagoting stitch, which extends over the toe and down the side.

Simplicity is seen in the various types of pumps in kid, suede and patent leather. One lovely style has most simple lines, outlined smartly with a fine bit of piping near the instep in a contrasting color.

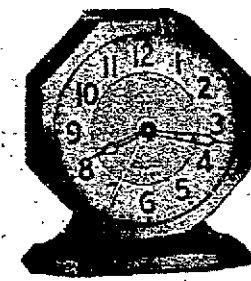

The rule for evening slippers this season is to either match perfectly the gown Milady is wearing or to contrast sharply. For this reason white moires, soft kids and fabric slippers are being chosen in white and dyed to match a particular frock. The shoe stores are glad to do this extra service for their customers since it means that the shoe will be just the right one for the woman customer's taste. Shoes of less leather and greater effect by cut-out designs are smart for evening wear.

With the continued popularity of lounging pajamas remains the femininity of lounging sandals. These may be had in kid or in satin, in either extreme or modified sandal form according to the taste of the wearer. Most of them have either high or low heels, one being as smart as the other.

New Hats Set Off Smartness Of Ensemble

Wide Variety of Colors Available to Match Your Costumes

Not to be outdone in this great ado about clever style, chapeaux have taken unto themselves a certain flatness. Yet, with all the smartness about hats, they achieve something almost unheard of, and that is in complimenting the general costume rather than dominating it.

The extravagant fantasies of past seasons and eccentricities have given way to what is known as "lady-like" smartness. The hat today is part of the costume in mood, personality, as well as color. Yet do not think that simplicity is by any means ordinary, because you'll find as many different styles in hats as you will in dress sleeves this year.

If you would be poised and sophisticated, match your furs with a shallow crowned and stiff brimmed sailor so prettily set off with a metal ornament, a bit of fur or rascally bow. Success is the name of one type of sailor here, that's come early into vogue with the new up in the back effect and daring tilt over one eye. Flirt is another smart little hat that dips coquettishly at an angle.

Blacks and browns are numerous but colors are just as abundant to match frocks or coats of color. The importance of trimmings, are in bows, self trims and metallic bits, gold, brass or silver. Veils are numerous but need not be worn. One particular hat in town has an unusual veil on a turban with large felt coin dots edging the bottom of the veil.

The close fitting turbans or cloques comprise some of the smartest looking groups. Shiny and dull satin in black is featured in one shop. Another grand hat of this same type is fashioned of a rough satin crepe giving the surface a wrinkled effect.

White is still a favorite and immensely smart in felt and this soft material called hatter's plush. For daytime wear the hatter effects are still with us in many manifestations, particularly tilted slightly forward. Rabbit, angora is being worn for daytime also, especially with rough wool suits or tweed ensembles.

One of the gorgeous velours is a deep brown one with a cut-out effect around the crown that resembles a shaggy leopards head. Hermapette is a new and surprising fabric, soft as ermine and most stunning. The after dark hats are simply devastating and reach the zenith in the caprices of design. These may be soft bits of velvet, or a shining piece of thin material, but one of the loveliest and sauciest is a white feather turban in one of the stores. It not only demands sophistication, but swoons down around the ears ever so slightly in a disengaging manner.

The important thing of course is to find the hat that harmonizes in line and color with your particular costume ensemble.

Pressing Helps Homemade Clothes

Amateur Dressmakers Can Profit by Tip From Tailor

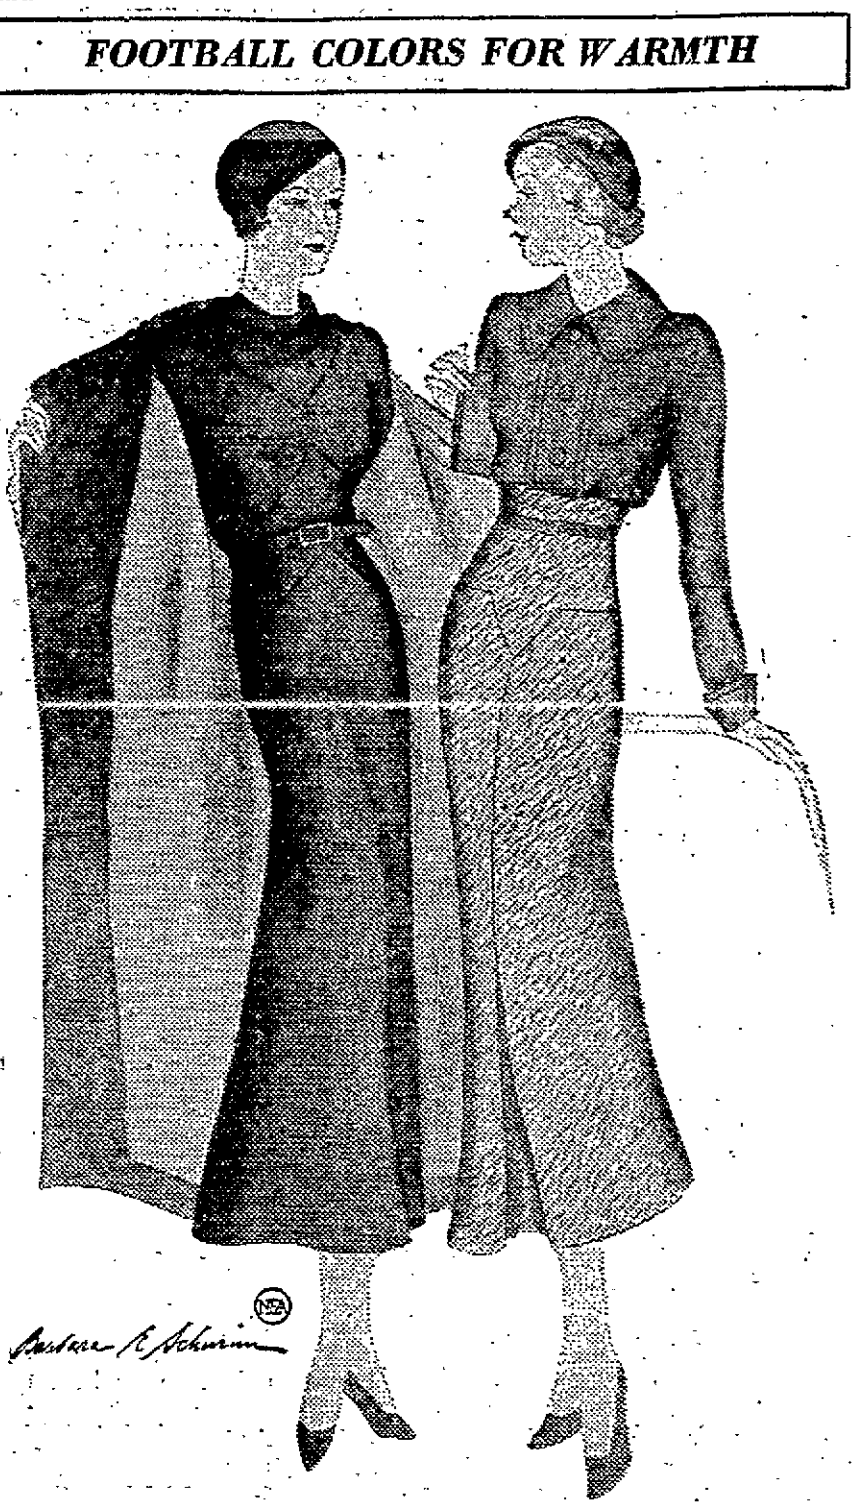

Now that fashion again dictates tailored finishes for winter dresses, the home dressmaker is once more concerned about how she can take away the "home-made look" in the dresses she makes or remodels at home.

The tailor's old adage, "In the iron is our fortune", is a good one to remember, especially in regard to woollens, which occupy the center of the stage this year.

If you are aiming at a tailored finish, press your seams as soon as it is stitched," recommends Miss Gladys Meloche of the home economics extension department at the University of Wisconsin. "A good pressing job cannot be done on a completed garment."

Wool requires more care in pressing than does any other material, Miss Meloche has found. To avoid a shiny, matted finish, she puts a woolen cloth on the ironing board. During the ironing process, the nap of the cloth interlocks with the nap of the garment and when the two are separated, the nap is raised and the desired dull finish produced.

The woolen garment is placed on the woolen cloth, right side down. The garment is dampened with a wet cloth or sponge, a dry cotton cloth is placed on it, and then the pressing can begin. The heavier the Football colors are the rage this minute for little woolen frocks to wear under winter coats.

But, whether you are a football fan or just a little office worker, these gay woolen frocks will appeal to you as the solution to the problem of getting wearable things and at the same time looking not only smart but cheery during the day.

Made of the loveliest, soft, wooly materials, these frocks are tailored to flatter your already slender lines or to make you look slenderer than you really are.

High Collared Necklines Their necklines are important, practically all of them being cut in the latest high-collared fashion. And, best of all, they do not have those lingerie touches that take hours to keep clean and are a nuisance taking off and putting on.

cotton cloth the better. A heavy unbleached muslin is recommended, especially if it has been washed to remove any starch or sizing. The iron needs to be hot, but not so hot that it will scorch. Have you ever noticed the imprint of the iron showing on dresses you have pressed? That is because the iron was not kept continually in motion.

For best results, the pressure on the iron should be light at first, so the garment is steamed. Then the pressure is increased and the ironing continued until the garment is almost dry.

Looks Like Cape but It Really Isn't One When is a cape not a cape? The answer is in a stunning dress in a College-ave shop.

Gorgeous blue velvet, which looks like a cape, as it fits over the shoulders, really is the back and sleeves of a grey crepe dress, fitted snugly to the hips of a model. The velvet ties together in front, extends across the back of the shoulders and forms the lamp shade puff sleeves that reach just below the elbow.

Chic, sleek, easy to wear and easy to slip into is this soft rabbits' hair wool dress of blue shown at the left. It is cut in flattering V lines, has a tricky little belt and a cowl collar that falls softly under your chin.

Beautifully tailored and very sporty in its simplicity, is the gay red and grey frock shown at the right. It gives the impression of being two pieces.

The blouse is of a lovely gay red, neat as a man's shirt and finished with fine seaming and buttons. The high-waisted skirt is of a red and gray mixture, of tweed that is as soft and wearable as the fine red blouse. This is a frock that has real distinction and will stand up under hard wear.

Well Dressed Man Will Wear Drape Models

Wool Is Predominating Fabric in Men's Shops This Season

The cries of wool, wool... draped models... and hats off the face have nothing to do with feminine fashions to be sure, but they are shouted just as loudly all the same because they are the very things that will make the man live up to his famous adjective of well-dressed this season.

The new drape model in suits, both single and double breasted, that may be seen in every man's store in town characterizes a change in men's clothing as important as the days when peg trousers and the old dip-front suit coats of 20 years back were in vogue.

What on earth is a drape, you ask? The newest models in Appleton shops will show you: broad but natural shoulders, wide collars, fuller chests, more closely fitted hips, shorter vests and higher pleated trousers as well as tapering trousers with a larger cuff. Whether fully draped or a modified style, all Appleton masculine shops agree on this new style. It just is, that's all.

Wool gathering has been done long enough by women couturiers it has been decided and now men will have a woolen wear. Even mufflers, socks and ties will be in wool, however, never displacing the lisle and silk socks or silk underwear from the picture.

The cry for belts is seen in the present mode for collegiate top coats, with poles leading the tweeds a merry chase for popularity. For overcoat trends it is said that town coats will sponsor half belt models to carry out the spirit although not the exact letter of the belted mode.

The clever snapper-brim hat no longer has an open field, not with the new style of looking-up. New brims have decided to roll away from the face with the movement of up-lighting rather than a slouch-over the eyes.

As for colors, male members of society have a great choice this season in the shades of the new Oxford gray, blue-gray, sage, black and brown. Browns are especially popular, accounting for the fact that brown shoes are stepping into view in greater numbers.

Pig skin gloves are the fashionable note for the daytime costume with the ever faithful mocha, still in favor for dressier occasions. Wool mufflers are preferred over silk scarfs of former years. Clocks strike a different note in socks, with lisle, part-wools and all wools being shown. The silk wools and French lisses will still have a popular streak in light of their comfortableness.

The standard, ever faithful white shirt probably never will be ousted no matter how many color fads descend upon the world. It is noted however, that neat figures and plain stripes with starched collars will hold their own against the whites, with shirts of solid color for those that like them or have suits with which to blend them. In the line of accessories, handkerchiefs stuck in the breast pocket will be white with a border to match the tie, it is desired.

CHIC IN STYLES FOR MEN

Clothes like those illustrated above lend an air of distinction to any man. From topcoat and hat to shoes, Appleton men can find the styles illustrated above in Appleton stores during the Fall Festival and at prices that are an amazing economy.

Marker Put on Site of Noted Love Song Locale

Ducktown, Tenn.—(7)—The creaking old mill where Maggie lived when she was young has been still a long time, but travelers who wander to the hill looking for a site made famous by a love song can find it easily now.

There is a marker that tells all about it—the mill, Maggie, the miller, and the man who married Maggie and wrote a tender piece about her. The poem later became a song. "When You and I Were Young Maggie" and it made Maggie just about as well known as Adeline, whose "fair face beams" in another popular number.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have marked the place where George W. Johnson met wood and married Maggie Harris. The old mill still stands.

Tennessee historians say Johnson was a prospector, a hunter of gold, who heard strange tales from Indians about wealth in the mountains of east Tennessee. That was early in the 18th century. Johnson loaded his canoe and took off from his home near the mouth of the Hiwassee river.

He followed the river and reached Spring Creek, then paddled up it. Finally, the water became so shallow he abandoned his canoe and walked. Far up the creek, he heard a mill creaking. It had been there many years, even then. The miller ground meal for Indians and pioneers. Johnson strode toward the mill and then saw Maggie. She was young then. Johnson forgot about the gold then and stuck around until he won Maggie's hand. He took her to his home down the river.

They returned together to the old mill when both were aged and gray. John was a mite feeble, and the scene of his romance touched him. So he wrote a little piece about

Appleton Youth Reaches France on Trip to Algeria

Lyman Houfek, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Houfek, Appleton, has arrived at Paris, France, from where he and Paul Behm, Cedarburg, are going on foot and by bicycle through Germany, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Spain and from there to northern Africa.

They reached Paris after having worked on board a steamer which took two and one half weeks to cross the Atlantic from New York to Le Havre. In New York the voyagers had met a business man who became interested in their trip and secured a job aboard ship for them. They made the distance from Wisconsin to New York in three days of hitch-hiking.

From the New York business man the two boys got letters of introduction to business friends in various parts of Europe. They also have a letter of introduction from Prof. Fittman B. Fetter, of the political science department, at the University of Wisconsin, who is now connected with international affairs at Geneva, Switzerland.

One letter is from Richard Halliburton, the romantic globe trotter who worked and hiked his way around the world several times and who wrote of his experiences. The youths are working when necessary. They want to go slowly and really enjoy the sights and so they will probably be gone about a year.

From Le Havre the two adventurers went by bicycle to Paris and are now cycling to Germany where they will walk along the Rhine.

The travelers plan to take a boat from Barcelona, Spain to Algiers, Algeria. They will stay there for the winter and in the spring they will sail along the Mediterranean coast to Alexandria, Egypt, and then across the Red sea to Calcutta, India.

Behm's uncle, Captain Gaston Ackerman, at Algiers, will accompany them on this route from Algeria and will arrange for their passage to San Francisco from Calcutta.

During the summer Houfek worked at Max Welton Braes, Bailey Harbor summer resort, going from there to California and Wyoming for several weeks, leaving for New York with Behm on Sept. 15.

Last year Houfek attended the University of Wisconsin where he met Behm. During spring vacation the two hitch-hiked as far south as Tennessee and on returning laid plans for their adventure this year.

An old Greek superstition, has it that it is unlucky to be married in May.

Velvet Smart For Gloves and For Handbags

Gloves Should Match Hosiery and Purse Matches Your Hat

With the advent of velvet for frocks and hats it followed immediately that gloves and purses should take on the same fashion appearance. Thus it is we have the newest of new velvet gloves and the return of the velvet handbag.

Both accessories are indispensable to any woman no matter where she is going. The rules to follow is that gloves match the hosiery and purses the hat and shoes.

With these rules of procedure in mind we can brave all the purse and glove counters in the city to see what is new. What we'll find are chic velvet pouch bags with dainty, maroonish clasp, smart new bow bags in grain and striped cloth and these new crinkled crepe silk bags for dressy afternoon wear.

Black velvet seems to be the stock limit of these new gloves in town although colors and styles are plentiful. If they are particularly wanted these are plain slip-ons for afternoon, semi-formal and dinner wear.

Black and browns are the accepted shades for daytime wear this fall with a trend toward short wrist gloves that have one button, although several styles in slip-ons and gauntlets are being shown in the city. White and black French kid are the favorites for evening with their long length. Kid cape and fabric are popular for daytime wear with suede being used for dressier occasions.

One of the daintiest French kids at one store has a lace ruffled cuff in white as a stunning contrast. It's a glove that a light shade called Mother Goose is being shown for those who cling to light glove shades.

For practical everyday use pigskins and capekins are being shown, smart looking, and the sort of things that complete football ensembles.

One store is showing an unusual pigskin glove for women drivers this winter. It is lined for cold weather, doubly protected by the toughness of the skin. Washable capekins will be seen more and more as the weather becomes colder since they are a heavier and warmer than kid.

For the fastidious woman, since the fabric glove makers keep in step with better glove details and have made them so very smart looking. Many women have fabric gloves as extras in case she needs a clean pair of gloves in a hurry.

If one wears suede shoes, then some of these good looking suede envelopes bags would be smart, but calf purses are worn with calf shoes to complete the costume effect. Some attractive handle bags which have come into vogue have gorgeous linings and an inner swinging purse.

The sort of purse that holds a business woman's needs or the type of purse some women like to carry because it is so thoroughly roomy is brown envelope calfskin. Inside is a compartment for papers or passport if you're traveling, smaller pocket places an attached coin purse, zipper pocket and mirror pocket. It is lined in part with leather and partly with moire.

Curb in Deflation Of Bank Credit Is Favorable Factor

Considered Fundamental In Improvement Of Economic Conditions

New York (AP)—A fundamental factor in the improvement in general economic conditions since last summer, according to Wall-st. banking authorities, was the checking of deflation of bank credit.

Total bank loans and investments, generally accepted as indicating the volume of outstanding bank credit, has risen substantially since July, according to the consolidated returns of the weekly reporting member banks of the federal reserve system, which comprise roughly half of the nation's banking resources.

It is true that loans have continued to decline, but this has been more than offset by increases in investments, chiefly in U. S. government securities. At the same time, return of currency from hoarding and an influx of gold from abroad, have enabled the member banks to lift their excess reserves at the federal reserve banks to a total close to $500,000,000. These excess reserves earn no interest, and the banks are expected to seek to employ them profitably in commercial loans and investments as conditions favor.

In November, 1930, total loans and investments of the weekly reporting banks reached their peak level of $2,600,000,000. By last July they had been cut to $1,420,000,000, or 22 per cent, representing a severe deflation of credit, through dumping of bonds upon the market, and calling of loans. But the latest statement, as of Oct. 19, shows the total has now swelled to $1,912,000,000. The deflation from November, 1930, to last July, was much more drastic than the extreme swing of the 1929-1931 depression, when the total was cut from $1,719,000,000 to a low of $1,420,000,000, a shrinkage of little more than 14 per cent.

The Guaranty Trust Co., in its current monthly survey, says "there are still many banks with some frozen assets on their hands; but the general process of liquidation is regarded as having reached the stage where it no longer represents a serious threat to the ability of banks to accommodate business expansion."

Are They Hatted or Not? That's Intriguing Question

BY DIANA MEERWIN

New York (AP)—This season half a hat is not only better than none, it is better than a whole hat.

To misquote Kipling, the hat of today is nothing much at the right and rather less than half of that at the left. At smart restaurants these nights much soup grows cold and ice cream warm as hat-conscious diners try to guess who is hatless and who half-hatted.

Another mystery is involved in the strange power of small flat turbans and still smaller berets to cling to their place atop a smoothly coiled head. The secret, however, really is simple—a narrow elastic band inside the hat holds it securely in place.

Representative Ruth Pratt has helped to entrench the new style by appearing at a campaign tea with a modified beret of black velvet, worn with a dress of black satin, trimmed with insets of the dull side of the material.

Mrs. Thomas Manville and Mrs. Deering Howe, both prominent socially, approve the same mode. Lunching at the Larche, the other day, Mrs. Manville wore a hat which was half a halo, and Mrs. Howe wore a modified tam-o-shanter on the right side of her head.

Kay Francis, motion picture actress, appeared in a black turban shaped like a doughnut hat and wearing her right eye. Mrs. William Oltman, white-haired and smart, wore a jaunty Robin Hood cap with a quill. Bobby Perkins and Madeline Cameron, both musical comedy stars, wore hats the size and shape of saucers, perilously perched.

Industry Claims Many Housewives

Quarter of 64,700 Badger Home Women Work In Factories

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau) Washington—Almost a quarter of the 64,793 Wisconsin women, who not only take care of their homes and families but are also gainfully employed, are industrial workers, the census bureau announced Monday.

A total of 15,598 Wisconsin home-makers, or 23.2 per cent of all the gainfully employed home-makers in the state, get their wages from industry.

Professional work claims 5,653 or 8.7 per cent of the total. This is the smallest percentage of home-makers engaged in professional pursuits in Wisconsin's vicinity. Percentages of home-makers in neighboring states listed as professional workers are: Illinois, 10.2; Michigan, 12.1; Minnesota, 11.8; Iowa, 11.8 and Indiana, 9.6. The percentage for the nation is 9.9.

Bounding typewriters, taking fast dictation, keeping books and doing other office work provides employment for 8,799 Wisconsin home-makers, 13.5 per cent of the total.

Agricultural occupations enlist the services of 6,431, or 9.8 per cent, servants and waitresses total 12,783 or 19.7 per cent, and Wisconsin saleswomen who go home from their store counters to keep house, number 6,619 or 10.2 per cent.

Of the 64,793 Wisconsin women, who cease their job of home-making each morning to go to work at their other job and leave that each evening to return to caring for their homes and families, 81.8 per cent are gainfully employed away from home; 17.3 per cent are gainfully employed at home; and the remaining 4 per cent failed to tell the census taker their place, or business.

Of the Wisconsin home-makers who find their remunerative job as well as their home-making at home, 6,431 are employed in agricultural occupations, some operating their own farms, others working on the home farm without wages.

According to the 1930 census, 3,923,516 or 13.8 per cent of all the 28,405,204 home-makers reported in the United States were gainfully employed.

The largest proportion, 24.4 per cent, worked as servants and waitresses, and 18.3 per cent were industrial workers.

Committee Votes to Disallow Two Claims

Recommendation that two claims be disallowed was made by the judicial committee at a meeting at city hall Tuesday evening. The claim of the Reinke, 218 N. State-st. for injuries sustained in a fall on Packard-st. was filed too late, and the claim of Richard Artman, 521 N. Badger-ave. was not submitted in the proper form and did not present adequate information. Mr. Artman sought damages for injuries suffered by his wife in a fall on a sidewalk but his claim did not give details of the accident.

Well Dressed Women Tinkle As They Walk

Choice of Accessories Helps to Keep One in Height of Fashion

If you tinkle when you walk, your choice in jewelry is perfect. If your scarf is an asset, your taste in scarfs is impeccable. If you sponsor buttons on your clothes, you are smart. If your cuffs reach elbowward and your collar buttons under chin you have reached the epitome of chic.

In other words accessories are the little things that count in this present world of fashion so it's well to know the rules of a well dressed woman.

Even blouses feature high necklines, but also have what is known as Rumba-sleeves, very pert full ones. Washable satin blouses at $1.95 are quite popular for wear with some of these smart winter suits. Then, too, there are these dashing plaid blouses for a bit of local color now and then.

Scarfs follow the long ascot length, even for dress. Most of the new ones are imported wools (only $1 or so however) made by hand looms in very bright plaids and stripes. Wool scarfs have taken to Appleton women very well. The report goes round.

You'll be surprised how demure jaunty stripes and bright colored plaids look for in spite of their high color some of the scarfs remain with that blending look instead of stealing the show. A luxurious scarf is of transparent velvet on a chiffon background, cut out to applique effect as it were. An unusual silk scarf in one store has a bold Roman stripe on one side and a right smart plaid on the other by way of diversion.

Just as buttons must be plentiful on dresses, so must bracelets form a rhythm brigade and jangle a tune all their own. Clanking bracelets in metal and crystal are pronounced very smart things to wear. Brooches in old fashioned settings and suspended on delicate silver chains are also popular, especially when combined with the effect of the cloister collar. Bracelets often match these pretty pieces.

Besides the cloister collar to transform old gowns into new ones there is the short pop-over style mostly in plique and white and egg-shell silk that gives a dress the air of being 1933-ish. These are for the high necked, button in the back movement.

No dress is complete without buttons it is said and by the looks of Appleton's button supply it looks like they could put them on everything. Copper and silver combine to make big round buttons that are swanky, bone ones are two tone for woollens, buckles match the buttons. Others are in composition, rhinestones and pearl effect in all.

Rural Teachers To Attend Meet

County Superintendent Points to Advantages Of Attendance

Rural school boards of the county are being advised by A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, that they are permitted by law to give their teachers time to attend the sessions of the Wisconsin Teacher's association at Milwaukee Nov. 3, 4 and 5 without deduction from their wages. Mr. Meating, Miss Nellie McDermott and A. L. Collar, supervising teachers, are planning to attend the meetings.

In his letter to the school boards Mr. Meating says: "The present crisis is one of the best arguments for the American public school system that I know of. Through a world depression that started about twelve years ago, first one nation and then another, has suffered shocks—complete paralysis in some cases—and we have watched. For more than three years, our own nation has been distressed, but our people have borne their troubles evenly, seeking a wise release from the thralls of depression. Education of the masses is the only possible reason why the ordinary people of the United States are behaving better than the ordinary people of England, France, Germany, Italy and Russia. What other reason can there be?"

"Other nations have boasted of their school systems, but each in turn has failed to meet the crisis. From Russia to England, the common people, the masses have failed to stick to the ship of state. Thus far, the American people have shown wonderful faith in themselves and in their country. The American ideal of mass education has stood the crisis thus far without breaking. Education alone can claim the credit—not schools only—but all agencies that have contributed to the high American ideal of service. Isn't this a fine return upon the 18 per cent investment that Americans have made in their own people? Eighteen per cent of cost, but still security in property and state. Eighteen per cent, but still building character into our nationalism."

G. O. P. Women Will Hold Meet Tonight

Republican women of Appleton will gather at Castle hall at 7:30 tonight to make final plans for the winnow of the campaign in the city.

Mrs. C. C. Shannon, chairman of the local group, will have charge of the meeting. All workers and any other women interested in taking part in the campaign are being urged to attend the meeting. Plans for getting out a big vote next Tuesday will be discussed.

Committee Votes to Disallow Two Claims

Recommendation that two claims be disallowed was made by the judicial committee at a meeting at city hall Tuesday evening. The claim of the Reinke, 218 N. State-st. for injuries sustained in a fall on Packard-st. was filed too late, and the claim of Richard Artman, 521 N. Wide Variance in Blind Aid Seen in Badger Counties

Appropriations Range From 3 to 39 Cents Per Capita

The Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance has made a survey of the appropriations for 1932 passed by the county boards of 49 counties in Wisconsin. This survey seems to indicate that certain counties in this state have a larger number of residents afflicted with blindness or defective vision than residents of adjacent counties.

Catamelco appropriated $500 for blind aid in 1932, or 3 cents for each resident of the county. Grant county appropriated $15,000 or 39 cents for each resident of the county. Columbus co. has the same per capita appropriation as has Grant co.

Commenting on the above the Alliance says: "Blind aid in Wisconsin was originally given to those persons who, because of their affliction, were unable to earn sufficient income to afford them a living. An opinion from the Attorney General's office broadened early application of the law, and enlarged the provisions to include any persons whose sight was so defective that he or she could not earn a livelihood."

"The state grants aid to the amount of $50,000 annually, and the counties, through local tax measures, add sufficient funds to pay the aids for the blind required by the state law. Nine counties of the forty-nine surveyed appropriated an amount averaging 10 cents or less per resident. Fifteen counties appropriated a per capita of from 11 cents to 15 cents. Twelve have appropriations ranging from 16 to 20 cents. Thirteen appropriated from 20 to 40 cents."

Favors Maximum

"In view of the fact that 86 per cent of the forty-nine counties surveyed appropriated 25 cents or less per capita, it is believed that conditions do not necessitate an appropriation of more than that amount in any county in the state and that more than 25 cents per capita indicates an extension of aid to persons other than those entitled to receive it. Assuming that this is true, a sum of at least $5,000 might be saved if counties would limit their appropriations to a per capita of 25 cents."

"Reports from some counties in the state indicate that pensions are often granted to persons having defective vision which does not seriously incapacitate the individual for many occupations. If this is true it may explain the wide discrepancy between the per capita appropriations in the various counties."

"Applications for pensions of all kinds should be carefully scrutinized and proper investigation made before any pension is granted. It must be remembered the county does not pay pensions, it simply appropriates money for this purpose which has been provided by the taxpayers."

Atlanta—The two cars collided noisily at a street intersection. From one alighted C. L. Brownlee, registering annoyance. From the other came D. R. Kersh, likewise warm around the collar.

"It was your fault," said Mr. Brownlee without equivocation. "It was yours," retorted Mr. Kersh. And so it went for an hour. Police were summoned. Mr. Brownlee threatened to sue Mr. Kersh, and vice versa.

The thing was getting somewhat out of hand when the business instinct of Mr. Brownlee, who is a salesman for a dairy, came to the fore. The argument turned forth with from cars to cows and in a jiffy it was all settled. Mr. Kersh will start taking milk from Mr. Brownlee's dairy this morning and Mr. Brownlee will not sue Mr. Kersh. The police were much relieved because after all, they said the damage to both cars amounted to only $2.

Invention Has Eased Task of Keeping House

Modern Appliances Have Taken Most of Drudgery From Home

The kitchen of today, the workshop of womanhood, a place of comfort and beauty, where science and art of cookery is blended with the art of time saving devices and gadgets.

One only has to stand in the middle of her shining, linoleumed domain and look about to discover the many, many things she now finds indispensable that her great-grandmother wouldn't even know how to use. The job of the old time housekeeper was something like a continuous chase from pillar to post and back again with most of the work done by hand and in the daylight because electricity was not then the servant of mankind.

Modern lighting, electrical gadgets to beat and mix and practically cook, large windows curtained with pleasing motifs, hot and cold running water and even the shiny linoleum that is scrubbed in a jiffy, are among the things that women of the olden days would have believed impossible. The shining porcelain sink with its numerous facilities for dish washing, vegetable preparing, automatic refrigerators that make their own small ice supply and preserve all manner of foods are among the many things grandmother did without.

Every time one wanders through a kitchen department there are newer things, more appliances to make housekeeping a faster industry.

In comparison to the old wide legged cook stove over which women used to stand to make their innumerable concoctions, the new ranges are a thing of beauty. In fact many of them of the console type could have a mirror and an attractive bowl of flowers and almost move into another room of the house disguised as a sideboard. Grandly built of grained white or colored porcelain with good looking metal knobs and handles and adorned with contrasting color schemes or graceful scroll work, the modern stove is a work of art. When the burners aren't lighted the top back panel folds snugly down to make a pleasing picture, hardly that of a kitchen stove. Its corners are rounded as carefully as a choice bit of furniture and its roomy drawers suggest compactness. The oven has moved to the top of the stove as one little step toward assisting a woman in her work.

The old granite ware, blackened bottomed coffee pot that used to simmer on the back of a cavernous lid, has been replaced by the many styles of urns and china pots that drip coffee or percolate their right at the table.

Electrical mixers just about do everything but eat the food now-days. One with a big green bowl not only mixes but beats, batters, drips, mayonnaise in the right amount and all sorts of odd jobs that take time around a kitchen. All of these things are easily cleaned and keep their beauty among the kitchen brigade of utensils.

Now that oranges have become an important part of the diet, there are hand machines in town that squeeze the juice out nobly in a thrice, while the automatic toaster is popping the bread over for the other side to turn a golden brown before turning itself off and the coffee is dripping of its own accord on the set table.

The most popular move in the modern kitchen has turned to color scheme in an effort to ensemble kitchen odd gadgets. You'll find sets of enameled bread boxes, cake tins,

Fine Comfort as Well As Style in New Corsets

This two way stretch is not a jest for feminine figners this season, not when these tight fitting styles demand good corseting to keep sylph-like lines. Girdles are being sold now that are excellently boned and yet have a good stretch to them, so that Milady does not have to sit up like a poker all day long. For the young girl rubberized girdles that fit with a perfect smoothness keep down the old waistline. Among the better corset models for this season's gowns is a wrap around affair that stresses good boning.

High Schools in Straw-Vote Tests

60 Per Cent of Younger Badger Students Favor Roosevelt

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)

Washington—Now they're even dragging high school students into this straw-polling business and Wisconsin youngsters, just cutting their political wisdom teeth, give Governor Roosevelt approximately 60 per cent of the total Badger votes cast for the two major party candidates.

The Civic Education Service of the National Capital which publishes the American Observer, the Weekly News Review, and the Junior Review, papers used in high schools throughout the country for the study of current history, took this latest test vote among its readers. Some parents, finding still another chance to express themselves, may have sent in some of the ballots, but the poll's sentiment is announced as primarily that of high-school students.

The Wisconsin vote to date is 2,836 for Roosevelt, 1,792 for Hoover. It is the largest vote recorded for any state, though Illinois with 4,621 ballots cast, and Kansas with 4,263 crowd it pretty close.

The Education Service has received 57,066 votes from 45 states and the results are Roosevelt, 30,778 or 54 per cent; Hoover, 23,288 or 41 per cent; and Thomas, 2,133 or 4 per cent. The Thomas vote is not announced by states. Hoover carried 32 states; Roosevelt, 37.

No Frame Around the Ultra-Modern Mirror

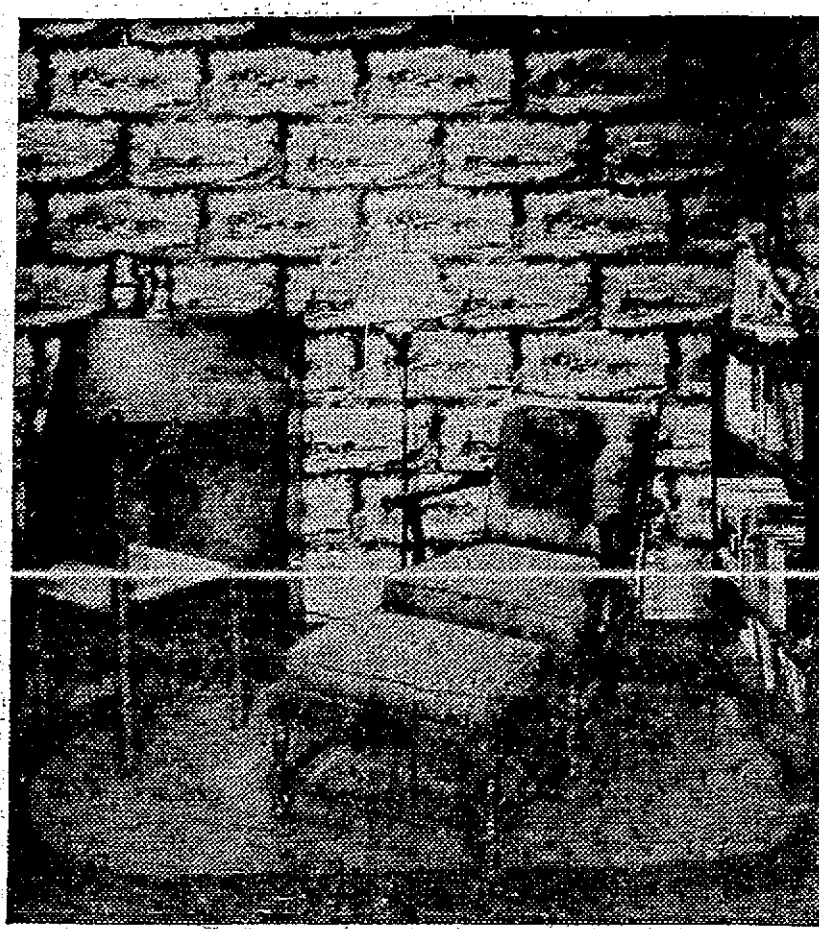

A semi-Venetian mirror in one of the furniture stores depicts the trend that living room mirrors are taking. It has no rim, except a brief piece around the top for ornamentation. The lower part of the frame is set on a flat backing without a frame. Mirrors are very inexpensive this year, a furniture man pointed out. Now is the time to purchase one's needs because prices for furniture are going up just as things will be starting to rise in all other commodities.

Wax paper holders, garbage can, sink strainer, spice sets, waste paper basket all painted to match with a dainty hand-painted decoration.

Wax paper holders are new in the kitchen, made so that the paper fits into the holder and then rolls comfortable out and can be torn neatly on the serrate edge of the holder.

Among other new innovations found in kitchen departments is the square dish-pan, placing the round ones into the oblivion they need. It's really a clever idea because the square pans fit into the modern sink and they hold more dishes. As a matter of fact the pans look for all the world like an extra roaster.

KEEPS 'EM AT HOME

Here's a corner that would promote industrious, stay-at-home habits in any youngster. The desk, lounge set and bookcase are placed together as a unit, and are served by the same floor lamp.

LIFE LIKE FLOWERS

One of the loveliest inventions of recent years is that of making artificial flowers just like real ones. Many shops keep them and when they are displayed, they look for all the world like a bit of a summer's fantasy behind wind swept windows. It's rather cheerful to have a bouquet of life-sized and life-like flowers about in the house.

Making of Quilts Supplants Bridge

Merchants Here are Ready And Able to Abet New Vogue

Appleton women have caught the fever! It's not bridge, gossip or luncheons that take the afternoons of busy hausfrau now, but good old-fashioned quilt making.

Yards and yards of cotton materials have disappeared from shelves of dry goods counters piece meal for this industry. Nearly everyone and her neighbor is busy stitching away on some pattern or another, which will in time, turn out to be an exquisite piece of patchwork quilting that our great-grandmothers would have been proud to have made.

In one store you'll find the dry goods department all prepared for quilt makers. They have entrancing package outfits for $2.98 for a complete quilt top with all the pieces included. Not only are the pieces ready to be sewed together but there are markers and directions for beginners. The material is quality Peter Pan cloth in attractive colors.

Then, too, there are special block packages, which may be purchased by block, perhaps as a pattern for your own odds and ends of quilting pieces. These are in two styles the Dresden plate and French bouquet.

BE SURE TO VOTE TUESDAY

Record Vote Is Indicated For Election

Registration of 47,000, 000 Greatest in Nation's History

The Associated Press herewith presents the figures on national registration of persons eligible to vote in next Tuesday's national elections. No governmental agency has ever attempted a collection of such statistics in advance of an election, and the Associated Press four years ago made the first compilation through its correspondents in every state. As in 1928, the figures this year are approximate, due to the fact that estimates by state officials had to be used where official totals were not made and where registration continues in some states up to and including Election day.

(Copyright 1932, Associated Press)

Washington—(AP)—Voting precincts in nearly every city, town and village in the United States will be the converging points next Tuesday for the greatest army of qualified voters in the nation's history—approximately 47,000,000.

A survey by the Associated Press, just completed, places the total number of persons eligible to take part in next Tuesday's balloting at 46,932,340, an increase of four and a half million over the previous record in 1928 and over ten million more than the actual vote cast in the Hoover-Smith contest of that year.

How many of the qualifiers will actually exercise their voting privilege is a matter of conjecture. Some election experts believe that stay-at-home voters normally about 15 per cent, will be greater this year. Others arrive at a lower percentage.

May Exceed 1929

Calculated on the basis of 15 per cent, the actual vote next Tuesday would be around 40,000,000, or 39,920,445, an increase of more than 3,000,000 over 1928, when the record popular balloting peak of 36,789,669 was reached. In 1924, the Coolidge-Davis presidential contest drew 29,091,492 voters to the polls. Some calculators figure this year's vote as high as 45,000,000. Others place it below that of 1928.

The 1932 registrations reveal declines in only six states—Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Idaho, Pennsylvania and Texas. In some of these, however, the decrease may be due to more conservative estimating for this year. In others, as in Pennsylvania, there is an actual drop.

All of the large electoral vote states, except Pennsylvania, show increases in registration. Some of the largest gains were made in the "swing" Wisconsin, increase of 620,000; California 875,000; Ohio, 600,000; New York, 340,000, and Indiana, 325,000.

Excepting Philadelphia, which felt the decline in the total Pennsylvania registration, all of the big cities showed increases.

New York city's gain was attributed by election officials to the normal rise in the city's population and the fact that this year, for the first time in the history of greater New York, a mayoralty election is combined with the presidential and gubernatorial balloting.

Parties Not Separated

Separation of eligible voters by parties is not customary in most states. However, in Pennsylvania, the Democratic registration declined, while the Republican figure jumped to a new high. Conversely, President Hoover's home state of California showed only a 29,000 gain for the Republicans as against a Democratic increase of 570,000. Women accounted for the entire decline of 59,000 in Pennsylvania's registration.

Here is the Keystone state's totals, divided between men and women: 1932, men 2,145,317; 1928, 2,144,762. 1932, women 1,767,354; 1928, 1,627,114.

Segregation of women registrants for statistical purposes is not attempted in most states, but women leaders believe the fair sex will roll up a larger vote than ever before.

Ruth Taunton, secretary of the National Woman's party, feels three factors will combine to send a record number of women to the voting booths—a natural growth through twelve years of political activity, a growth "forced by efforts of many to destroy the economic independence of women in the name of the depression," and a belief that women "are feeling keenly the economic pinch, just as men."

It is going to be an economic vote this year instead of a prohibition vote," she says. "A hungry child in the home will react to send more women to the polls than worry over whether her child will take to drink when he grows up, should prohibition be wiped out."

Despite the jump in national registration, William Tyler Page, former clerk of the house and an election authority, figures the actual vote this year may be smaller than in 1928.

He says "an unusually large vote in the southern states, which cannot be expected this year, helped to swell the total" in 1928.

"It is unlikely, in my judgment," he adds, "that the total vote this year will exceed that of 1928, and I question whether it will be as great. Germany, with a population of a little more than half that of the United States, cast a total vote for president of only a few million less than our total in 1928. The reason was that in Germany the voting age is 20 years and over and the election was held on Sunday."

Colorado Voters May Decide Party Rule in Senate

Successor to Waterman to Be Important Figure in Upper House

Denver—(AP)—Upon Colorado voters rests the responsibility of deciding a contest which will be a factor in determining whether the Democrats or the Republicans shall have a numerical senate majority in the session of congress which meets this winter.

Unless there are further changes in the lineup before the second session of the 72nd congress meets, the successor to the late Colorado Republican senator, Charles W. Waterman, to be selected at the Nov. 8 election, will figure prominently in the very close lineup of the major parties.

The count now stands at a tie, each major party with 47. The outcome of the Colorado election, and a short term race in New Jersey, will fix the party standing in the senate.

The choice of a senator for the unexpired term of Waterman lies in a three-cornered race which is the only senatorial contest in the Rocky mountain tier of states—Colorado, Montana, New Mexico and Wyoming—all other senators of these states holding over this year.

Candidates for the short term ending next March are Walter Walker, Grand Junction, Colo., newspaper publisher, former Democratic state chairman, and Karl C. Schuyler, who is the Republican candidate for both the short term and the six-year term starting next March. Walker was appointed by Gov. W. H. Adams, a Democrat, to succeed Waterman, pending the selection to be made by the voters at the November election.

Seeks Year-Term

Alva B. Adams, who served in the senate from 1923 to 1925 under appointment as successor to Senator Samuel D. Nicholson, (R), who died in 1923, is the Democratic candidate for the six-year term. When it devolved on the Democratic state executive committee to make a designation of candidates for the short term, Adams indicated he did not want to accept this, believing voters might be confused in marking their ballots.

Schuyler has made his campaign in support of the national Republican administration—and this has been a dominant issue of the campaign in Colorado.

Two members of the house of representatives in this group of four states were eliminated in the primary election. They were Charles B. Timberlake, Republican, who has served continuously from the second (Colorado district since the sixty-fourth congress, and John M. Evans, Democrat, who has served in nine sessions since the sixty-third to which he was first elected, from the First Montana district.

For Timberlake's place, George H. Bradford, former district judge of Greeley, is the Republican candidate, and Fred Cummings, president of the National Beet Growers association, and the Rocky Mountain Beet Growers Cooperative Marketing association, is the Democratic nominee.

Joseph D. Monaghan, Butte attorney, who eliminated Evans in the primary, is opposed by Mark Fitzgerald, Republican, a farmer of Steubenville, Mont.

All the other incumbent representatives of the four states are in the running.

Aside from New Mexico, where the Progressive Republicans went over to the Democrats the campaign in this section for state offices has been moving smoothly, with principal attention directed toward economy in state affairs.

In each of the four states there has been an increase in registration and leaders are looking for a heavier vote than that cast in the 1928 presidential election.

Furniture Is Not Following Mode in Dress

Simple Rather Than Victorian Lines Characterize Furniture

Let sleeves go leg o' mutton, hats one-sided and skirts sweeping the heel tops but women folk can be thankful that furniture does not revert to the Victorian era. Instead, simple lines are being used in furniture with less ornateness and carved gadgets to dust.

In one shop it is found that women are choosing subdued colors because they harmonize so beautifully with old pieces already in their homes and that often they furnish homes entirely on a budget plan. In fact this shop believes in budgeting a home, either room by room or by the entire house. It is then that a certain medium can be reached and furniture chosen to supply certain needs.

It was also here that we discovered that the types of woods most liked include the oaks, mahogany, walnut, satinwood and dark maples. Furniture periods most popular are the styles that belong to Queen Anne, Duncan Phyfe, the two Louis periods, Louis XV and XVI, the Adam and Sheraton styles.

Three desks entirely different, yet each having its own peculiar characteristics and beauty were a Colonial spinet desk, a lovely Queen Anne in walnut with its graceful legs as contrasted to the heavy walnut and oak in the Italian renaissance style.

Queen Anne legs certainly beautify the lovely rust sofa here set apart as unusual by its hand carving and the brass studs against the rust cloth. Of a richer hue is the iridescent plush shaded linen velvet English sofa with its characteristic tufted back. The cushions on this piece are fitted with zippers so that they may be removed readily for cleaning. Another unusual piece is a French commode, semicircular of satinwood and hand decorated. The cabinet doors open on a shelf with a drawer above it. Brass fixtures open both cabinet door and drawers.

An end table that is very different is this mahogany affair with a three tiered shelf arrangement on top made so that magazines can slip into the shelves flatly.

Love seats are very charming for apartments and for those who seek extra room for an inexpensive cost should consider the excellent styles of studio couches. One furniture store has them in some clever home spins in plain colors. These are grand for an extra piece in a man's den, too.

In the dining room refectory tables that new long kind are most popular. In one place there is a small corner cupboard that would be just the thing for a small dinette or apartment dining room.

A dining room done in Duncan Phyfe is on display in one furniture store, presenting a dignified picture. Mahogany is the wood in the piece with the chair seats being upholstered in a green rough textured material, the colors of which are brought out in the floor rug. On the buffet with its croch mahogany front, there is a pair of charming lamps, replicas of those used way back about the time Duncan Phyfe came from England to the Americas. They are bronze lanterns with a sandal glass shade slightly bulging. The handwoven tapestry behind the buffet is hung with metal end ornaments reminding one of the spear ends of famous gladiators.

Green and ivory rubbed enamel form the background color of the charming bedroom in one store. Gold trimmed, with dressing table bench boasting a golden silk cover, the colors are contrasted by a green chaise longue in one corner. The boudoir lamps here again match the furniture. This pair are of bronzed hand wrought iron with the little snuffer shades so popular.

In a living room scene the rug is most noticeable for its capturing beauty of soft blended shades of an Oriental. This particular carpet is an American made product, a Guilian design of the famous Tree of Life motif.

Nation Crowded, But Italy Urges Population Gain

Fascist Great Problem, However, is to Find Room for All

Rome (2)—One of the fascist government's gravest problems—that of finding room for Italy's teeming millions—is rendered more vital by its own ceaseless battle to keep the population increasing.

Mussolini has been hurling the question of what to do with all his people at the world ever since he came into power. Simultaneously he urges those same people to augment their number.

It creates a situation that is magnified by the present delicately balanced division of Europe and which that reason probably will be there to go unsolved for the moment. But indications are that eventually it must force itself upon the world.

213 To Square Mile
Statistics just completed show the density of population as 213 to the square mile. In 1912 it was only 200. The increase has been methodical since 1861, when the figure was 124.

Persons not of fascist Italy's way of thinking might see a ray of hope in the fact that in the last two years there has been a noteworthy decline in the numbers of births. The fascists, however, view the matter in just the opposite light.

They term the decline a "grave

STARS STRONG FOR BLACK!

Black gowns that are different were worn by stage stars at the fashion show for the benefit of the Actors' Dinner Fund in New York. (Left) Ermine sleeves made original puffs, with the ermine tails flying like streamers, on a sheath-like gown of black velvet, worn by Selena Royal. (Right) Draped armholes, sparkling buttons, and a slashed skirt were outstanding features of a gorgeously crinkled black crepe gown worn by Helen Broderick.

danger" and "suicidal tendency" and have set themselves to check it.

Large Families Win Prizes
Prizes frequently are offered to families with the largest number of healthy children and Mussolini repeatedly tells the nation that a people must multiply to be in ascendancy.

The figures that caused the wave of alarm showed that in the first half of 1932 there were only 502,408 births in Italy, compared with 535,825 and 544,613 in the first six months of 1931 and 1930 respectively.

A noteworthy decline in the number of marriages also was revealed, the figures being 125,967 for the first half of 1932 and 137,979 and 151,750 for the same periods in 1931 and 1930.

There were 41,709,581 people in Italy when the last census was taken in April, 1931. This represented a gain of approximately 2,500,000 in 10 years. All these people are crowded into an area almost half the size of Texas.

Republic's Fate Hangs in Balance As Germany Votes

Dictatorship by Ex-Crown Prince Is Possibility After Nov. 6

BY MILTON BRONNER
Berlin.—In its thirteenth year of life, the German Republic faces the possibility of being smothered to death in an avalanche of ballots. For on Nov. 6 take place the national elections for the Reichstag (Congress). It is the fourth big election for the German people this year, each with its disturbing effect on what little business is left.

It took two general elections to return the venerable Paul von Hindenburg to the presidency. Then Chancellor Franz von Papen dissolved the old Reichstag, a new one was elected and dissolved, and now another must be elected. Voters feel "What's the use?" for they know that if this time they elect a Reichstag which displeases the "New Iron Chancellor," it too, may be dissolved.

If the new Reichstag is such that it votes "no confidence" in Von Papen and his "Cabinet Barons," there is every reason to believe that Von Papen will dissolve it. And that might be the end of parliamentary government in Germany.

Von Papen is a Junker, survivor of the militarist caste which ruled Germany before the World War, whose ideals and ideas linger in the German mind. Lieut.-Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, also no believer in democracy, is Von Papen's chief adviser, and a formidable one. And behind and between them looms the shadow of Wilhelm Eitel Friedrich, former crown prince, now a gray-haired man of 50. The crown prince has taken active roles in recent political campaigns. In Germany, despite a pledge he took not to do so when allowed to return to Germany in 1923. He has conferred with Adolf Hitler and other German political leaders, and the rumor flies through Germany that he is to be made emperor, or at least some sort of regent or dictator.

viser, and a formidable one. And behind and between them looms the shadow of Wilhelm Eitel Friedrich, former crown prince, now a gray-haired man of 50. The crown prince has taken active roles in recent political campaigns. In Germany, despite a pledge he took not to do so when allowed to return to Germany in 1923. He has conferred with Adolf Hitler and other German political leaders, and the rumor flies through Germany that he is to be made emperor, or at least some sort of regent or dictator.

France Looks Askance
It is hinted that the Von Papen government, having dissolved the Reichstag, may prevail on the 85-year-old Von Hindenburg to resign, turning over the power to the Hohenzollern dynasty again through some pretext of dictatorship or of saving a best nation.

This recurring rumor is the bogey that has disturbed Europe ever since the war, especially France and her allies, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Von Papen has been noncommittal about a change in the form of government, has denied it is a subject for discussion, but has hinted that no outsiders can tell what form may be best for Germany.

But if Von Papen only dissolves the Reichstag to be elected Nov. 6, it probably will mean government by the decree laws issued under the signature of Von Papen and President von Hindenburg, and that in itself would be virtually the death of the German republic, as republics are understood in America.

Reichstag May Be Dissolved
This is likely. There seems no chance that Von Papen will command a working majority in the new Reichstag. The experience of the last one shows he will not tolerate votes of "no confidence." So the new Reichstag must either be silent and "rubber-stamp" Von Papen's decrees, or face dissolution.

One more split in the chaotic party situation is apparent. Hitler's Nazis (an abbreviation for Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei) National Socialist German Workers' Party) have broken with their former allies, the Nationalists, which includes the Stahlhelm (steel helmets or war veterans). Hitler, as leader of the predominant party at the last election, demanded Von Papen retire and that Hitler form a cabinet. Von Papen refused. He offered Hitler several cabinet seats. "Hitler? refused, demanding 'all or none'."

Hitler's Support Alienated
This may lose ground for Hitler in the coming election, and he may well have passed his highest point. Many former supporters feel he should have acted when the last election gave him his chance. They were displeased when he elected to wait. This alienated support will probably go to the Nationalists and Von Papen. This alienated vote goes in their favor for an end of the constant bickering and strife that has had Germany on the rack for 15 years. Von Papen gained considerable popularity from the way in which he spoke right up in meeting to France regarding disarmament. And of course both he and Hitler are for repudiation of the Treaty of Versailles; Communists, Centrists and old-fashioned social democrats are expected to hold their own. In any case it seems clear that a distraught Germany, harassed for 15 years by the burdens left by the war, will rise in an effort to shake them off.

What kind of a revised government Von Papen might institute is hinted by his most recent decree, which aroused unpopularity. It was designed to cure unemployment, and provided that any employer who took on new employees was authorized to reduce working hours and cut the pay of old employees in proportion. It amounted to a 25 per cent pay cut for those affected, and only about 13,000 new employees were reported. Not only the Communists, but the Nazis fought the Nationalists on this decree.

Von Papen's Reforms
Von Papen is known also to favor raising the voting age to 25, which would hit hard both the Communists and the Nazis, especially the latter, for both draw largely on very young members. Von Papen also has already consolidated the government of Prussia with the national government, and has been backed up by the courts. He wishes to achieve greater national unity, a stronger front, and a degree of socialization under state control.

Economy Isn't Forgotten to Achieve Chic

Many a Neat Little Trick in Modern Clothes to Save You Money

There are tricks to every trade but this is one season when modern woman doesn't have to bend her nose too hard on the grind stone to achieve a glorious chic for a few shickels.

The tricks this season lie in the clothes themselves and little ingenuity is needed on the part of the shopper, simply good buying sense.

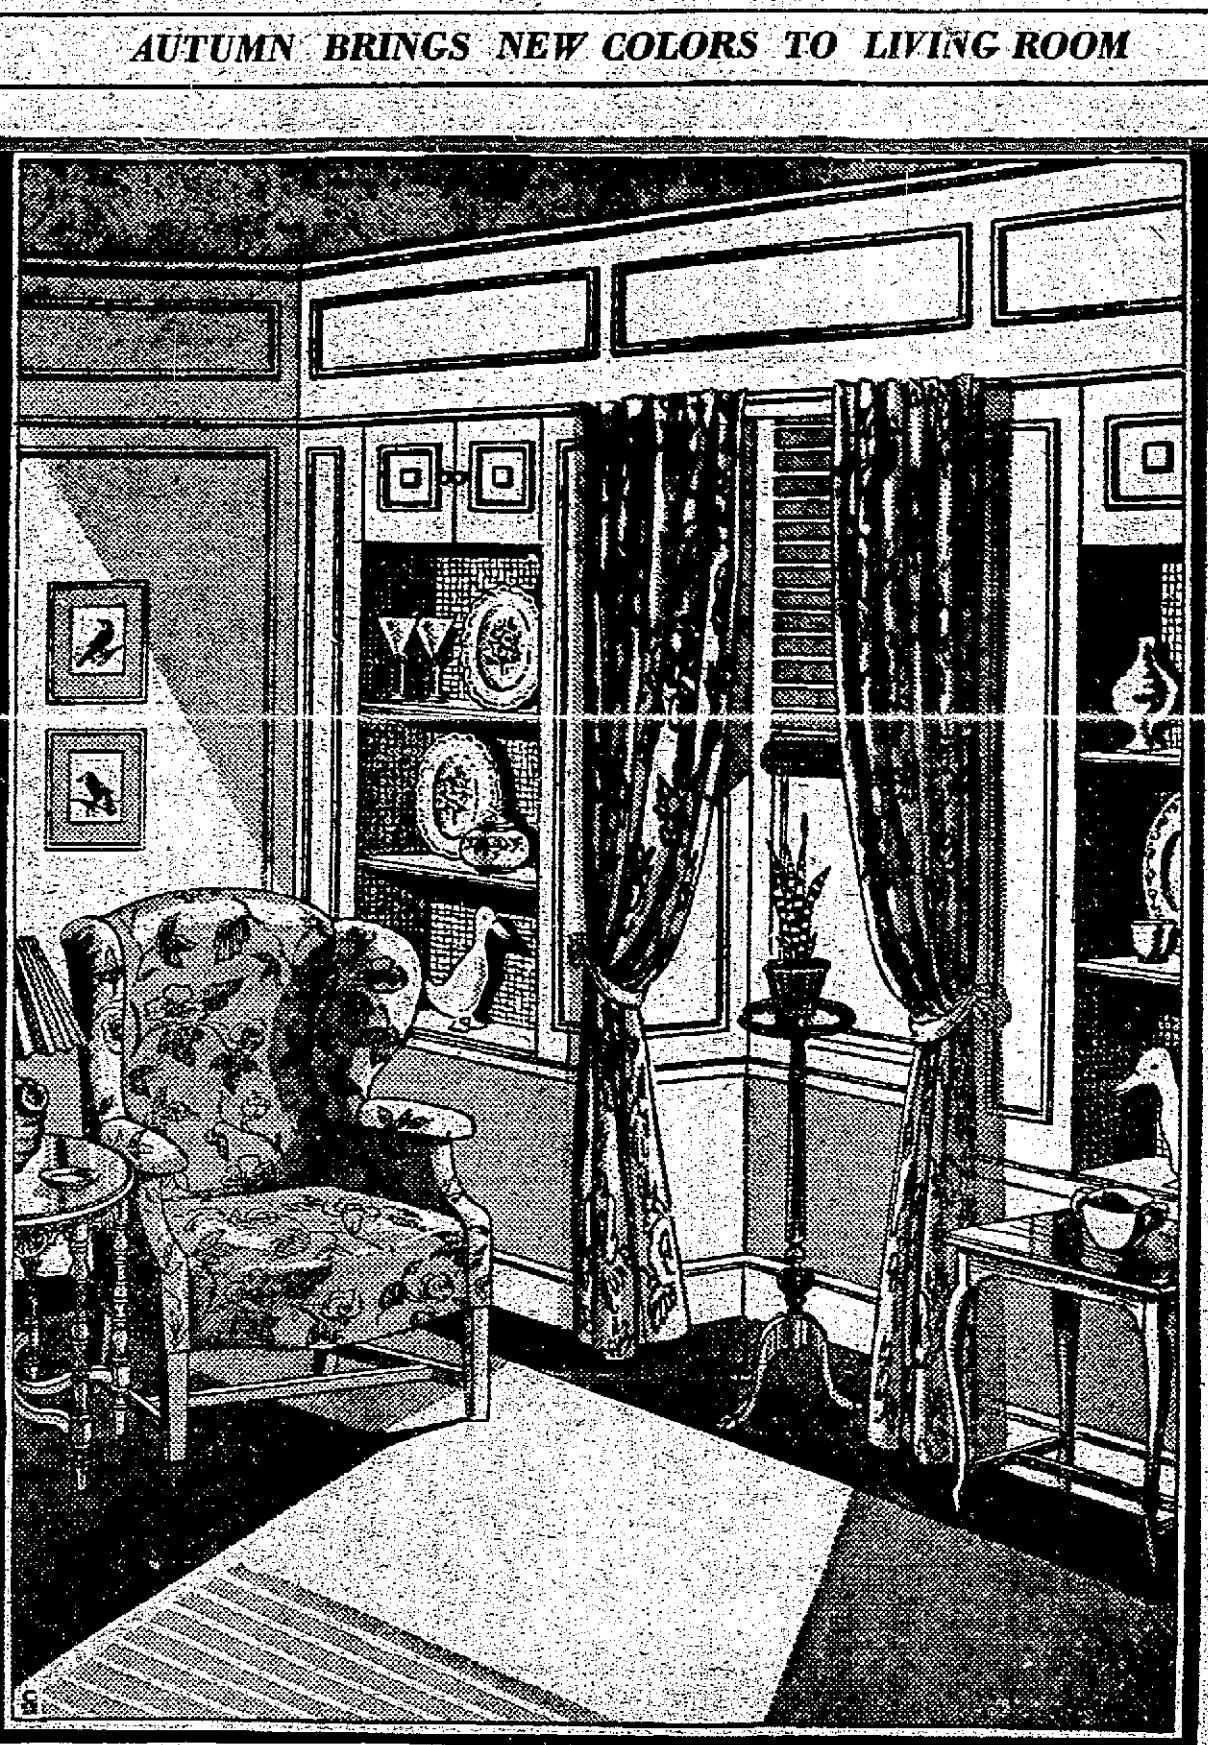

For instance, coats have a double duty outlook this year. One moment a coat is a startlingly simple tailleur with its high neckline and alluring buttons, a complement to any smart costume; then the next minute it sallies forth to tea with a scrumptious, double furred cape collar. That's the point of having a coat such as this, the new luxurious fur collars and capes may be worn on or off and either way achieves its smart purpose according to the occasion.

In many cases the cape collar can be transferred to another costume, worn over a trim winter suit for street, or hunched about one's shoulders over a dinner gown. It's a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde idea, isn't it?

But that's only one aspect of the economical season. What can be done with one black dress and several collars and cuffs is a story in itself. With these new, crisp, nun and choir boy collars and cuffs a dress changed its entire personality. Then there is always the ruff effect that a suit, suit, the mouseline achieves. One may wear it carelessly around one's neck or tacked down in a square or round effect. It's charming.

The fall and winter suit has reached its elegant height this season with a jaunty three quarter coat of rough tweed easily adaptable to other daytime costumes or three piece combinations. The point about the modern three piece suit is that the materials are very swanky and with the gorgeous blouses that are certainly creations if ever there were any, they serve readily for afternoon when the coat is off for a few hours.

No whisky will be made this year in any of the distilleries in the Scottish combine.

There is no greater urge to stay at home than a comfortable and cheery living room, and no better opportunity for seeing and buying the new colors and modes will be presented than during the Fall Festival. Somewhere in Appleton stores you will find what you have been looking for to make that living room of yours more attractive.

Whole World Is At Your Service In Grocery Store

Every Land Searched to Find Delicacies for Appleton Tables

Flour, navy beans and pork chops along with all the other ordinary things in stores means mere groceries and meats, the things we eat every day, but tucked away on the shelves of several Appleton markets are unusual things that smack of romance.

Just looking at the huge green olives makes one vision the well kept hills of Spanish countryside from where they came, and the lustrous pot-bellied jars of jams and marmalades bespeak of old, old pottery vats in a country lane where wise men have kept their precious jam making secret for hundreds of years. The sparkle of a Parisian dinner, renowned for its brilliant table conversation as well as food, the vibrant odor of red hot Mexican chili con carne in a bordertown cafe in Mexico, bursting with color, mingle with the scene of gay wine shops on the continent where the tinkle of glasses is a part of the continuous noises along the boulevards.

It's these extra foods that bring color into many Appleton markets, long noted for their service. It is rare unusual to obtain out of season vegetables, extraordinary fruits and queer dishes in so many places in one town, but that is indicative of the manner these shops are run. The meats and potatoes of every day are available, but also are the unusual foods that bring romance to the table.

Of significance in this part of the world, known as a prohibition country, one may find little bottles of Burnett's famous rum syrup, the sort of thing that makes mince pies for Thanksgiving the sort of delectable masterpieces that our ancestors used to have in the good old days. A modern use is on grapefruit cocktails, or these delicious meal beginners concocted from shrimp or lobster.

Following this same trend are the famous Quast wine jellies that have been aged in barrels for 10 years as wine and then cooked slowly down to a jelly. The nice part about it is that when you buy the jelly you order it according to its wine name, sauterne, port, burgundy and so on.

Hailing from the Holy Lands district are the huge and rich Samarian figs. From France come the bottles of capers and virgin olive oil. Wee, hand skinned and hand picked onions called Pearl are from Holland and have all the characteristics of onions except the after effects.

Cross and Blackwell's jams and marmalades made from the same famous recipe since 1776 come from England's shores as does the choice tarragon malt vinegar and parmesian cheeses. One of the attractive bottles of marmalade seen at one store carrying the Cross and Blackwell line had bits of orange peel in the shape of tiny goldfish seemingly swimming through the luscious orange color of the marmalade itself.

Those huge, jumbo olives that are the size of golf balls are of Spanish descent and are known as the largest olives grown. After spending their earliest days on a picturesque Spanish hillside or valley, whichever place they grow, they are bottled and sent over the world. Rich, dark ripe olives are always available in town and in one store is found some choice, honest to goodness chili con carne as the first, chili con carnies intended it to be.

Rubettes is the name of the new seedless grape that comes in the colors of green, red and orange and may be used for trimmings just as maraschino cherries are.

New White Metal Tray To Carry Sandwiches

Here is an idea that is both useful and terribly smart, found in one of the smaller shops. A lovely punched metal tray in white that has scooping sides and a firm handle. Its used for sandwiches and has two charming yases to match to form a truly alabaster color ensemble.

Petrolle Cuts Weight for Go With Canzoneri

Billy Down to 136 1-2 Pounds Two Days Before Battle

BY HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Apparently
fistic observers were a trifle too previous with their fears that Billy Petrolle would have plenty of trouble getting down to the class limit for his 15-round lightweight title match against Tony Canzoneri in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

The battle-scarred Duluth veteran, who weighed around 142 pounds when he started training for this his first "shot" at any title, tipped the beam at 136 1/2 pounds at the conclusion of his workout yesterday.
He has two full days plus the usual drying out process, to shave off the pound and a half that stands between him and the class limit of 135 pounds.

His handlers are confident he can do that with ease and retain all his strength. Petrolle himself said last summer when the Canzoneri match first was discussed that he would have no trouble making the poundage in the winter time although it would be a virtual impossibility in the summer.

Champ Has No Worries
Canzoneri, of course, has no weight worries at all. The champion is a "light" lightweight, almost never scaling above 133 pounds.

Pre-fight indications are for a close-to-capacity house when the battlers enter the ring Friday night.
Canzoneri, of course, has built up an immense following through his many spectacular triumphs here.
There is a striking similarity in the rivals' careers. Both are veterans who looked to be about
"through" a few years ago and then came back better than ever to confound the critics in a series of brilliant performances that eclipsed anything either had accomplished before. Both not only look like fighting men but really are.

Started Against Tony
Petrolle started his comeback campaign, aided enough by outpointing Canzoneri in a 10-round bout in September 1930. Since that time he holds knockout victories over Justo Suarez, King Tut, Billy Townsend and Eddie Ram; a technical knockout triumph over Bat Battalino, and decision victories over Jimmy McLarnin, Lope Tenorio and Battalino. In this period he has beaten only four times, losing decisions twice to McLarnin and once to Jack (Kid) Berg and suffering a one-round knockout at the hands of King Tut.

Since Canzoneri won the lightweight title by knocking out Al
Singer in one round in November, 1930, the champion has been beaten only by Johnny Jadick of Philadelphia. Jack gained two close decisions over Canzoneri in January and July of this year.

Now he successfully defended the crown three times, beating Berg twice, once on a knockout and once on a decision, and outpointing Kid Chocolate a year ago. In addition he won by knockouts or technical knockouts over Joey Kaufman, Lew Kirsch and Frankie Petrolle, Billy's brother, and outpointed Johnny Farr, Tommy Grogan, Herman Per-lick, Cecil Payne, Phil Griffin and Lew Massey.

Punts and Passes
Evanston, Ill.—It's all very hard on the freshmen—but the scrimmages against the yearlings sometimes prove helpful to the scrubs.
Northwestern's second team did better than the regulars against the Frosh yesterday and as a result
Chester Sutton, fullback, and Roy Auguston, quarter, won part-time jobs on the varsity for Saturday's game with Ohio State.

Cambridge — If Harvard players were superstitious, they would have a hard time being optimistic about Saturday's game with Army. The tradition, backed by years of results, is that Harvard can't beat Army at Cambridge and the Cadets can't win at West Point.

Detroit—With the addition of a Thanksgiving day game with Oregon State, six states and the District of Columbia are represented on the University of Detroit's schedule this year. In addition to two Michigan schools there are two Pennsylvanians, Washington and Jefferson and Villanova, Oregon, Georgetown from Washington, D. C., Holy Cross from Massachusetts, Marquette from Wisconsin, Loyola of Louisiana.

Oakland, Cal.—Five of the St.
Mary's football players who are eastward-bound for the Fordham game Saturday saw action two years ago when the Gaels triumphed over the Rams. They are Captain Bill Beasley, who scored the winning touchdown, Angel Brovelli, star of the game, Emory Rubel, center, and Mike Stepanovich, and Bill Carpenter, guards.

Morgantown, W. Va.—The change in Georgetown's coaching system was all bad news for Earle Neale, West Virginia coach. It meant all the scouting that had been done in preparation for Saturday's game had to be cast aside and nothing would be known about what to expect from the Hilltoppers.

Coch Murray Shakes
Up Marquette Eleven
Milwaukee—Expected demonstrations took place on the Marquette University football team yesterday as the varsity engaged in a lively scrimmage with the reserves. Bill Luoma, a veteran, was at left tackle for Bob Dobyns, and Frank Mier-wa, a reserve but a letterman, filled in for George Rosemark, a senior,
University of Detroit in the Michigan city Saturday.

OUT TO WIN BY A HAIR

Of course, all this cutting-up will be to no avail if Centenary College, Shreveport, La., turns in any hair-raising wins on the gridiron.
But the frosh seem to think that since clipping is barred on the gridiron it might work wonders when tried on their hair. Back in 1927 the freshmen gridders had their heads clipped and the varsity won every game on its schedule. So they hope it works during 1932.

Wisconsin Gets Long, Varied Drill

Freshmen Given Hard Workout as Varsity Preps for Illini

Madison (AP)—Using a wide variety of play, the Wisconsin football eleven yesterday gave the freshmen a taste of what it expects to do to Illinois in the homecoming game here Saturday.

The varsity tore through the yearlings on power plays and spinners and changed the pace with lateral and forward passes. The offense was clicking even though the best men in the yearling squad were working at top form.

Coach Spears made some changes by way of further experiment. He used Hal Smith at quarterback for a while, using Bobby Schiller, halfback, in Smith's place at fullback.

The need for a good reserve quarterback to replace Nello Pacetti was probably back of the move.

Dave Tobias, the big tackle who has been used only as a reserve on few occasions during the past two years, has apparently gained a regular job at right tackle because of his work against Ohio State last week.

In the first string line yesterday were John Schaller, an George Dennovich, ends; "Moon" Molinaro and Tobias, tackles; Mario Pacetti and Capt. Kabat, guards; and Bill Koenig, center. The regular backfield was composed of Nello Pacetti, quarter; "Mickey" McGuire, Joe Linfar, halfbacks, and Hal Smith, fullback.

Coach Spears is expected to devote most attention during the remainder of the week to work on the Badger offense. The Wisconsin defense has been a tight one all season—only 16 points have been scored against the Badgers in five games—but the offense has shown a tendency to bog down when pitted against a heavy opposing line.

Big Nag Leads Pro Ground Gainers

New York (AP)—Bronko Nagurski, plunging fullback of the Chicago Bears, now leads the field in the race for ground gaining honors in the National Professional Football league.

The former Minnesota ace has gained 247 yards for an average of better than five yards a clip. Earl (Dutch) Clark of Portsmouth and Ken Strong of Stapleton are tied for second place. They each have gained 339 yards but their average is lower than Nagurski's.

Jack Grossman of Brooklyn leads

Stanford Backing Its Veteran Coach

Deny "Pop" Warner Being Criticized for Recent Defeats

Palo Alto, Calif. (AP)—Despite two straight setbacks to the Stanford University football team, the sentiment here is all for Coach Glenn "Pop" Warner.

The Cardinals dropped a game to the University of California at Los Angeles last Saturday 13 to 6 and were on the losing end of a 13-0 game with Southern California the week previous, but the general feeling is that the two games were lost by breaks against Stanford.

Alfred R. Masters, graduate manager, said there always are a few chronic kickers who criticize a team whether it wins or loses.
"We are for Warner, win, lose or draw," he said. "Stanford out-scrimmaged U. S. C. and U. C. L.
A. and made more first downs.
They were just tough games to lose."
Warner recently renewed an agreement to remain at Stanford five years. He is a member of the faculty and has no written contract and may sever his connections with the university at any time. Last year several eastern institutions were reported bidding for his services.
Roy McArthur of Georgia Tech punted 22 times in the rain and mud against Auburn for an average of 37 yards a try.

"45 YEARS OF FAITHFUL SERVICE"

Glasses are Made to Fit Type of Face

BY ELSIE PIERCE
Georgeine, a faithful reader, writes in behalf of "all womankind who wear glasses."

Dear Miss Pierce: I read your recent columns on eyes, hoping you would have something special, something encouraging to say to unfortunate like myself, to all womankind who wear glasses. I know that many physicians feel glasses are not necessary, but I cannot be without mine and I feel that they absolutely spoil an otherwise passably lovely face.

So we must hurry and write a cheering message to Georgeine, and to all other women who like herself foolishly feel that glasses are a handicap. They need not be. When Georgeine calls herself "unfortunate" she forgets that the greatest majority of people fall in her class. And if you're with the rest of the world, why worry?

Glasses are no longer (or at least need not be) the conspicuous, beauty destroying thing they once were. Optometrists have created various shapes to fit and flatter faces — full and profile. Then there are different types of glasses, created like clothes and perfumes for different occasions. Glasses become especially smart when one can afford to have two or three pairs chosen just as important accessories to one's costume. Sturdy, framed type for sports, for instance, and for business. Then there are the lovely new fine metal frames for afternoon and for evening either the pince-nez or oxford types with narrow frames or completely frameless.

Choose Becoming Types
When purchasing your glasses choose becoming types and be as careful in their selection as you would in a chapeau. Use the hand mirror. Examine yourself full face and especially profile, because protruding from your face they give the profile a hard look. Although the large shell frames are passe, they are usually quite becoming to brunettes with large faces and features so if you are a tall striking type you can afford to be individual. For blondes or faces with delicate features, the new narrow pinkish gold rims are preferable.

Hats, coiffures and make-up can do much to call attention away from one's glasses. The center part, for instance, or the severe, sleek arrangements emphasize facial contours and glasses. A soft, waved part, over the ears, down on part of the forehead and near the temples offsets any hard lines and is particularly flattering to the face that wears glasses. Likewise, a brimmed hat, particularly medium sized brim tilted up on one side and down on the other are kind to the be-glassed face. Turbans, berets and tiny toques are very hard and should be avoided. The lips should be emphasized and the eyelids touched ever so lightly with shadow, the lashes touched with mascara and curled back so they will not rub against the glasses.

There, Georgeine, I hope we've helped you, and all womankind who wear glasses.

DRAMA AND SOPHISTICATION

All gowns have a flair for drama this year. Some of them go about it quaintly, while others have a decided leaning toward sophistication. And some, as the three pictured frocks show, know how to combine the two.

The afternoon tea gown at the top is fashioned from supple black velvet that molds the body in a devastating manner. The round white ermine collar, with its many little tails is demure and wise enough to know it. The sleeves are particularly fascinating and romantic with their rabbit-ear cut. The skirt is ankle length and the belt is rather high.

A new crushed velvet material has been used for the dress in the center. It, too, understands the art of clinging in a svelte manner. This frock, created by Marcelle Dormoy, has a cowl neck and brief sleeves. It is especially good in pure white, but light colors are attractive, also. The fabric supplies all the ornamentation except for two clips that decorate the neckline, one on either side.

Black takes some more honors in the third dress. The frock, which is a copy of Malmbecher, comes in Sheerel in a rich dull black. It follows the simple princess-line, molding itself to the body, and flaring below the hips. The skirt touches the floor. The suggested epaulets are lined with pink and the cluster of soft flowers, which supply the only ornamental note, are of a matching pink.

tend to induce a feeling of unrest in most people. Business activity in most fields will probably be both fitful and fretful with a general feeling with the coming of night that little has been accomplished. Business and social ventures embarked upon on this November 3rd will be of uncertain outcome. In the home, irritating and disturbing influences of a petty nature will be apparent.
The child born on this November 3rd will probably have a rocky road to travel due either to his inability or unwillingness to consider the wants and feelings of those about him. More than just a trace of selfishness will be found in his character. The child will be possessed of a happy nature and inclined to exaggeration and to extravagance in his speech.
If November 3rd is the date of your birth, you are probably motivated in all that you do with a desire to be outstanding, to excel. You do not seek necessarily wealth or power, but it appears your vanity to be pointed out as the person who has done this, or accomplished that, with great success. Unless you find yourself doing some creative work or occupying a position of many and various duties you will probably not remain long in any one line of work. You are not a rolling stone at all, but you must always be doing something new, and if possible, something different than the ordinary run of work.
Your outstanding fault is probably the unflinching habit of "airing your own views" on any subject whatsoever. Your conversation, more often than not about yourself and what YOU think, is rarely brilliant, usually dull and boring. Occasionally you forget yourself, and at such times your friends and business associates are given a glimpse of a much finer you. On these occasions you show yourself to be fundamentally kind and considerate of others, interested in the welfare of people as a whole, more than willing to lend a helping hand, and all in all a most pleasant person to be with. Why not try more to cultivate this seldom seen self?

All Children Cannot be Stars in Music, Sports

BY ANGELO PATRI
"I wish I knew some way of making Clarisse practice her music."
"Doesn't she practice?"
"I should say not. If I didn't force her to go to the piano and stand there until she began playing she would not touch it. I lie awake nights trying to find a way to get her to practice. I've promised her everything but it's all no use."
"Why don't you try letting her alone for a change?"
"She wouldn't do a thing. I'm telling you. Know what she did last week? So delectful. I was so upset I cried. I made her go to the piano and I stayed there until she got her music on the rack and began running her fingers up and down. I had people coming to dinner so I had to go. I listened every once in a while and I heard her playing. At least I heard the piano going."
"Well, her father came home early on account of the company and he came to me in the pantry and said, 'Mary, is Clarisse supposed to be practicing or what?'"
"She's supposed to be practicing. But as a matter of fact she is reading a shocker and the kitten is doing the practicing."
There she sat reading a perfectly awful book and every once in a while touching the keys, and letting her kitten go up and down the keyboard to fool me into thinking she was playing phrases over and over."
"I'd stop giving her music lessons."
"It's just a shame when Mrs. Clure's Marie plays like a streak. She gave a recital at the town hall last week and everybody was crazy about it. And I can't get Clarisse to do a thing."
You can't get Clarisse to do a thing but cheat if you feel like that. Making a child learn to play a musical instrument, take a professional course, learn to dance for public appearances so that you can enjoy the applause won't do. Children do not learn that way. An art must have its source in the child's soul. If it is not there you can never put it there. Almost any child can learn enough music, dancing, drawing, entertaining, to enjoy a good performance, and to assist at simple ones. The children who can perform so as to command public approval are few and far between. Ask yourself why you want to teach the child an accomplishment before you start. If you suspect yourself of longing to enjoy public applause vicariously, think again. It is unfair to use a child that way and no good comes of it. Fathers sometimes make the mistake of trying to make star sportsmen of their sons. A place on the big team, a seat in the shell, a medal for a first in track or field sometimes becomes so important that it wrecks a boy and shakes a home to its foundations.
If you have a star, well and good. Let it shine. If you have a pleasant righthand tend it well and let it shine happily within its own little circle. It is better than way.

Imaginative Optimism Helps Defeat Contract

BY ELY CULBERTSON
Imagination and optimism are essential qualities of a strong defensive player at Contract. To be sure, he needs steadiness and sturdiness under fire, as well as the more showy quality of imagination. But there are many contracts made at the Bridge table that should be defeated if the defending players not only cash their apparent tricks, but risk a little in the way of permitting a possible overtrick and give both imagination and optimism full sway.
A brilliant example of both imagination and optimism occurred in a recent Duplicate game at the Wissachickon Bridge club in Philadelphia, where Mr. J. K. Trimble, a newcomer in Philadelphia bridge circles, played with Mr. Charles H. Goren, had an opportunity to distinguish himself.

The Bidding:

Mr. Goren, who sat South, made a rather courageous attempt to stop East and West's path to game by his bid of four diamonds, but West could not be denied after his partner's double Raise, as he decided that the game was "in the bag."
Mr. Trimble opened the spade King, which was the "tip-off" to his partner that his hand was void of diamonds. Mr. Goren overtook the King with the Ace to give his partner a ruff by leading a diamond. This was trumped by North, who now made his daring and brilliant play. He returned the spade 2, realizing that it was the only opportunity to defeat the contract. South won with the spade 10, and led another diamond, thus permitting North to cash another trump trick and defeat the contract.
The chance of finding South with the spade 10 was remote, indeed, but from North's standpoint it was the only chance to defeat the contract.

Study the hand, decide how you will bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

GOOD LATE TODAY
BY ELY CULBERTSON
DEPRESSION PROBLEMS
Today's subject is not a cheerful one, but as it is still the present problem of almost everyone in almost every community the world over, we may as well face its handicaps as best we can. My first letter says: Dear Mrs. Post—How can I rise above what is becoming an obsession about the never-absent subject of money? I am of a generation, which was taught that money was something never to be mentioned except to one's bankers or lawyers or upon necessary business occasions. But today, it seems to me, that not only does one hear about nothing else in which every group one happens to be, but one's own thoughts are forever doing sums in addition and subtraction, and one's normal impulses gradually seem tinged with stinginess. I can feel my own features assuming the aspect of Scrooge. It makes me very unhappy.
Answer: I think we all know how you feel and what you mean. The only thing for those who have very moderate wherewithall is to make the most careful budget they can. Then get under its exactions and say nothing! They should go even further than this and think nothing—except at such times as when calculations must be made. To be able to turn off thought (exactly as one switches off the light) is largely a matter of training, the same sort of training that is essential to sportsmanship.
Dear Mrs. Post: I must resign from a club to which I belong, and my resignation must be written. Would you please send me a written model including the heading, closing, and the addressing of the envelope?
Answer:
Mrs. James River
Secretary Contract Club,
My dear Mrs. River:
It is with great regret that I find it necessary to resign from the Club, and to ask you therefore to the STORY OF SUE By Margery Hale

"HOW did you like the music of the song?" David asked Joan, as she brought the subject into the conversation.
The waiter came just then with iced fruit cocktails and Joan didn't answer until he had gone.
"You wrote a charming melody for the lyric," she answered. "How did you happen to have it published?"
"Do you remember the old Uncle I was chaperoning around Europe? The one with the money? He died and left me his fortune. I have enough to get by now without thinking about the future. The market crash didn't hurt him. He was a canny old fellow—had everything sewed up safely. I bought some publishing house stock—I'm keen about that game. And I like to feel around with music. Anyway, we brought out your song the other day. It's to be taken over by a well known orchestra. That girl who was singing in their soprano soloist. She's been trying it out. I've been trying to find you. We can do more songs."
The words were mine, you know," Joan said quickly.
"But darling, you gave them to me!"
"For sentimental reasons, not commercial," Joan answered.
"But you may have your share of the profits, of course—all the profits! I never thought of that. I was too eager to see the song going over." He looked puzzled.
"I'm not interested in the profits—even if my stocks are worth less and your uncle made good investments!" She smiled and the smile curved her lips crookedly.
"Then what's the matter?" he asked, genuinely puzzled.
"Nothing at all. I'll be all right." "You don't understand. . . . Oh, Joan, I've come right on loving you the same. Do you think that fool song brought me here? I wanted to see you—to see if I still felt anything. If it's any satisfaction, I do."
"I don't know. You should have told me that before you began on the song. It would have been better. But technique, dear!" She could even talk lightly. She could see the shoddy places in the armor of the man. And she knew, looking at him now, that she could have him if she wanted him. That it was her game, not his. She could make him come pleadingly.
She wondered if she wanted him. This indifference of his had been too studied. He had been afraid that he might give himself away. Did she want him? She asked herself the question and wondered. But there would be time to decide later.
The waiter was removing the plates.
"Shall we, dance?" David was asking.
"I'd love to," she answered. Perhaps with arm around her the old rhythm would come back. Some of the magic from the sunny days and the star-bright days at the Lido would find its way across the space of time.
The music was haunting. She had forgotten how perfectly she and David danced together. Just one movement, it seemed.
"We haven't grown any worse, have we?" she asked.
His arm tightened ever so slightly.
Joan's eyes wandered to a man and woman who were following the waiter to a table. The back of the man's head looked familiar. It was—it couldn't be. . . but it was.

NEXT: Joan is unhappy.

Youth Has Right to Find Way in This New World

Most of the struggle between the older generation and the younger is over the question of personal liberty. It is the fight of the young for freedom and the battle of the old to hold them prisoners. The desire of the young to go forward, free and unhampered, and the determination of the old to hold them back.
The old say: "We are older. We are wiser. We have had more experience than you have had. Listen to our warnings. Let us hold you by the hand and we can keep you from stumbling and falling and hurting yourselves."
And young reply: "Life turns wisdom into foolishness because life is eternally different. The circumstances are never the same and no situation occurs twice. Your experience cannot teach me any thing because my problem will not be your problem, and because my mind, my temperament, my talents are different from yours. Where you failed I may succeed. Where you succeeded I may fail. The work that you loathed may set my soul aflame with ambition. The woman I will love may be one you would hate. The one who would appeal to you may leave me cold. Besides, I live in a different world from yours, a new world with new manners and customs and standards."
"Let me go. Let me try my strength! Perhaps I shall fall and hurt myself, but my wounds will teach me to walk more warily. No doubt I shall make mistakes, but out of them I shall learn something I would never have known if I had followed your copybook rules."
"If you love me, do not try to keep me hidden away from danger. Brace me up with the courage to meet it bravely when it comes. Do not try to keep me unspotted from the world, ignorant of its temptations. Teach me how to resist them. Let me be my own master. Let me make my own fate. And, good or bad, I shall be happier in it than I would be in any that you could devise for me."
"After all, my father and my mother, you cannot go through all the long journey of life with me. Sooner or later we must part company and then, if I have not learned to walk alone, if I have learned on your strength instead of my own, if I have looked to you for guidance instead of depending on my own judgment, I must fall by the wayside and perish. So set me free and let me go my appointed way."

This is the cry of the children of today. They have broken with the old patriarchal tradition that gives the parents the right to decide their lives for them and to choose their occupations and pick out their husbands and wives for them and to settle their uprisings and down-fallings. The privilege of deciding their own destinies they arrogate to themselves.
Undoubtedly, they go too far in throwing off parental restraint too early. Undoubtedly, they could learn much from the wisdom of their elders. But somehow, some way, through suffering, through sacrifices, through a thousand blunders they made on to a happiness and content, and a success that they never know in any existence that father and mother arrange for them and hand them on to a silver platter.
But the point is, so far as parents are concerned, that it is a condition and not a theory that they must face. The old order has passed and the new is established.

Youth has emancipated itself. Even feminine youth. The old way of controlling children by force is a dead-letter law at which they mock, and the only way it can be done is through diplomacy and guiding them as subtly they do to not make them feel so free they do by making them feel so bound. After all, it is the locked door that makes a prison. Leave it on the latch and it becomes a pleasant dwelling place and the mad desire to escape from it has gone.
Wise are the parents who realize that their children grow up and reach a place where they do not need their fathers and mothers, and who, when that time comes, send them out into the world with their blessing.

And wiser still are the parents who prepare themselves for the inevitable hour when their children will spread their wings and fly from the home nest by providing themselves with interest and occupations and amusements so that they will not be left utterly desolate when their youngsters are gone.
And far, far better for us to make our own lives so full of interests that we shall not be parasites upon our children and compelled to suck our joy out of their lives. DOROTHY DIX.

Margie: If you are sure this woman is the husband-snatcher she is reputed to be, it would be well for you to drop her, for you know people judge us by the company we keep. However, you must be very diplomatic about "dropping" her, for if you antagonize her in any way she will seek revenge by trying to steal your husband. Do not heckle your husband about her, simply treat her wiles as so much child play, develop new interests and new friendships, and you will soon be rid of this worst-of-all feminine felines.

Dark Hosiery Is Smart for Daytime Wear

Loveliest of Stockings Offered at Ridiculously Low Prices

No matter how alluring and fantastic the name, it's the color that counts in fall hosiery this season. One of the little things that will make or ruin a woman's otherwise smart ensemble.

Rapid strides have been made in stockings since the day when women wore cotton hose for everyday and pure, white stockings under the Sunday best pantalettes. Ever since the advent of shorter skirts and the stocking maker have gotten together until today a woman's leg is clothed as beautifully as her hands and with as perfect taste. Sheerest of sheer cobwebby materials have usurped the place of drab lises. Lockstitches, gauges and intricately patterned hems and now-run lines have filled the thoughts of merchants and makers, while sheer loveliness and beauty has been the gain of woman-kind.

It is of course a matter of preference whether we wear a sheer stocking or one of medium or the heavier service weight, these are mere details just as the length or width of heel.

Must Be Dark

The color is the most important cry this season, stressing the one word, Dark, for daytime. No matter what other idiosyncrasy you have, wear red gloves, big, bold earrings, or have a grand passion for a certain type of shoe, but for heavens sake, wear dark stockings with your daytime ensemble.

Brown is an especially smart shade with the new black brown creating sensation this fall. The reddish brown tints seem to be disappearing in favor of deep browns the color of toast or burnt wood shades.

The brown black, created for this season, is one of the new shades that has a certain allure for its rather true brown not quite black. This, and the dark, gunmetal shades are to be worn with darkish clothes of course. It naturally follows that one's style cry is always reflected in another, because so much today depends on the blend of one's complete appearance from the top of a new cocked hat down to the very toe of the smart street shoe.

However, the interesting part of stockings in these shops in town is their color names. You'll find the fashionable fur tones, sponsored by three Paris designers, in one department store, the geographical allure of hot, southern sands in another shop, while other places carrying certain lines have a group of connected names.

All Kinds of Names

But what's in a name, when you can match your clothing with the proper shade? What modern woman needs to learn today, is to know what she is buying. Purchase reputable stockings and be sure of the color. The proper course to take of course, is to find which kind of stocking one likes and then be able to ask for it by name and color name.

In the language of one store, however, a luscious brown, is worn with dark browns, wine, red or the grand new greens to be accompanied with brown accessories as a general rule. Sable, the red brown still smart to wear is particularly suited to such costumes as wines and reds or dark, reddish browns. Then there's mink, the real brownish hue that's worn with enchanting true brown, black and navy blue costumes.

New colors and handsome handwork join to make fall and winter clothes lovelier than ever. Buyers have been unusually discriminating this year and designers have met their challenge by combining the greatest ingenuity in presenting fashions that are new, but lack the ostentation of former years. At left above is smartly tailored two piece beige wool sport dress and uses beige and red wool for the yoke which gives the dress interesting lines. Fabric collars on wool coats are something new, and the coat at the right illustrates this mode. The upstanding-collar is a rich yellow chamolts on a stunning rich yellow wool coat.

Dusk is a lovely medium shade, blue fox, not blue at all, but an elegant neutral brown that can be worn with so many charming combinations.

In another shop, a more worldly tone is taken when speaking of brown black. Here it is called Congo, while the taupe shade is named Bombay, Sahara and Arabia are the two soft brown shades that blend well with autumn colors.

Another group, with perhaps the same color range call their names after the fashion of a French naturalist. These color names range from reve (dream to you), to va-peur, putty beige, taupe mist, faun brown, to tawny, shadow and dusk brown.

There is a great deal behind the purchase of a pair of stockings, or as a thrifty woman says it, two pair of hose. The first rule is to know what kind of stocking you are buying, then be sure to have a wide hem, so that there is ample anchorage for one's garter. The old rule of purchasing two pair of stockings at a time really is infallible. It sounds like spending more money, but it's the most economical way in spite of how it sounds. When you have two pair exactly alike from the same box, then you have four stockings that will wash out alike, and in case of a catastrophe, you always have an extra socking to match the pair when you need it.

All in The Care

Nowadays more than half the wearing quality of any stocking depends on how it is cared for. All stockings should be rinsed before they are worn, to prolong the natural life of the silk as well waylay the funny feeling of a brand new stocking on one's leg. Various temperatures of water should never be used when washing stockings any more than when laundering a fine piece of silk. With a constant temperature, by all means not hot water, a mild soap and a bit of elbow grease, washing of hosiery is a simple procedure.

Another warning, especially to working women in a hurry to have a clean pair of stockings for morning or an evening appointment, is never hang silk hose on radiators or in direct heat to dry if you intend to prolong the life of the silk. The newest innovation in the hosiery field is the "can't run" var-

Need No Great Expense To Fit up Dressing Table

Time was when only ladies of leisure who spent their days adorning themselves and attending fashionable committee meetings could afford a beautified dressing table with its dainty triplicate mirror and intriguing top.

But not so in this day of ingenuity and so-called hard times. For a few dollars any ambitious young lady can buy herself the smartest sort of kidney shaped tables in unfinished wood, and with a given amount of gingham or glazed chintz, ambition and a can of alluring paint, she can make with her own hands the dressing table of her dreams. What's infinitely more important she can make it fit into her own bedroom with ease by using the same material that she has in her drapes or window curtains to form the skirt of the table.

The top may be painted a lovely tone of rose if her room is done in that color, or green, and then protected with a plain strip of window glass cut to fit. If she has satin for the full table skirt, a lovely brocade top would be applicable and thoroughly lovely. The flounce, as will saleswomen in the Appleton stores where you may purchase it. Like any other stocking they will wear out eventually, but they will not run because they are constructed different than the ordinary stocking. Close inspection shows that an extremely fine, pin point mesh makes up these stockings and they give the appearance of a fine, dull tissue or chiffon.

Today, stockings are the lowest priced they have ever been with all indications that the prices may rise with the rise of market silk prices. In the light of what one paid for lovely stockings a few years ago, the hosiery prices of today are ridiculously low. Three years ago the ordinary, every day stocking cost about $1.85, while today stockings may be purchased for less than $1. The $1 and $1.35 varieties are excellent stockings while those that cost slightly more are the exquisite $2 and $3 hose of other years.

ALWAYS DEAD TIRED?

How sad! Sallow complexion, coated tongue, poor appetite, bad breath, pimply skin and always tired. What's wrong? Chances are you're poisoned by clogged bowels and inactive liver. Take this famous prescription used constantly in place of calomel by men and women for 20 years—Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. They are harmless yet very effective. A compound of vegetable ingredients. They act easily upon the bowels, help free the system of poison caused by faulty elimination and tone up liver.

Rosy cheeks, clear eyes and youthful energy make a success of life. Take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, nightly. Know them by their olive color, 15c, 50c and 60c. All druggists.

these tables will show you, are simple to make, even though they look simply gorgeous when they are finished, hanging in neat billows around the kidney shaped table. Chintz in gay designs, taffeta, or sheer dotted swiss over a colored silk may be used for the flounce. If you are thoroughly ingenious and thrifty, use the lowly checked apron gingham!

The last step of buying the mirror is a matter of taste. This may be bought in unfinished wood, you know, and painted to match the dressing table. Or if there is an old mirror around it could be utilized beautifully, perhaps by being hung above the table by a long mercerized cord the color of the flounce. Unframed mirrors are very popular now and may help add to the beauty of the room, or a set of three mirrors may be placed on the table itself as a part of the outfit.

The smart thing to do would be to tie up the entire color scheme by matching window curtains and bed spread and such. One of the sweetest rooms ever seen was "done over" this way with rosy organdy forming the flounced bed spread, perfectly elegant curtains, ruffled down its sides, and the same organdy was placed over a pale green silk for the dressing table, since the bedroom furniture was painted a pale green.

Unbreakable Tray

A new type of tray that is indestructible is interesting. The ones in town are darkish in background color with either a hunting print ed cord the color of the flounce. Unframed mirrors are very popular now and may help add to the beauty of the room, or a set of three mirrors may be placed on the table itself as a part of the outfit.

Have Your Monogram Put on Your Guest Soap

An unusual thing seen in a gift shop, bits of bars of soap very correctly monogrammed. One may have one's name or initials put on the bars, or if one is lucky enough to live in a mansion, have the name of the place on the soap bar, especially if it's used for guest soap. In-cent-ive soap is another unusual piece of washing cake. This is a transparent soap for children that has a bright, shining, honest-to-goodness copper penny in its very middle, whereby little John or Joan begins to enjoy scrubbing his hands and face in order to get at the prize.

Hold Last Rites For Crash Victim At Clintonville

Many People Attend Funeral of Rueben A. Greb on Monday

(Special to Post-Crescent) Clintonville—The funeral of Rueben A. Greb, 39, whose accidental death occurred Friday evening, was held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Greb residence on N. Main-st. Services were conducted by the Rev. W. C. Kurtz, pastor of the Methodist church. Hymns were sung by a quartette composed of the Rev. Kurtz, Edward Wills, Ralph Parfitt and LeRoy Hughes. The American legion, of which Mr. Greb was a member, attended the funeral in a body and marched to the cemetery where they conducted the military ceremonies. Interment was made in Graceland cemetery. Pall bearers were Dr. J. H. Murphy, Dr. James Levine, Roy H. Morris, William L. Gould, George Messers and Harry Bauman. Directors of the First National bank acted as honorary bearers.

Rueben Greb was born at Waukesha Oct. 25, 1893, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Greb. His early life was spent in that community where he became interested in the canning industry over 20 years ago. His marriage to Miss Geneva Gehring of Oconto Falls took place at Chicago, Nov. 27, 1919.

The Greb family came to Clintonville about eight years ago, when Mr. Greb became the president and general manager of the Clintonville Canning company, which position he has held since then. Before coming here, he managed canning plants at Oconto Falls and Coleman, Wis.

Mr. Greb was a member of the Clintonville Rotary club and served as its president a few years ago. He was a director of the First National bank, an active member of the local Chamber of Commerce, American Legion and of the Riverside Golf club.

His death occurred Friday evening when returning from a business trip to Oconto Falls. He was driving alone when his car struck a wagon load of poles from the rear, the poles penetrating the radiator and windshield of the car and one struck him in the head, causing almost instant death.

Survivors are the widow and six small children, Donald, Julia, Bentley, Willis, Edna and Allen of this city. His mother, Mrs. W. C. Greb, of Waukesha, seven brothers and three sisters. They are Harry of Miami, Fla.; George of Blytheville, Ark.; Edward of Freeport, Ill.; Delbert of Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Raymond, Mitchell and Howard of Waukesha, Mrs. Carl Gebhardt of Milwaukee, Mrs. Carl Falk and Mrs. Dan Dunn of Waukesha. A very large number of friends and relatives were present at the funeral which was one of the largest held in this city.

Rotarians held their weekly noon luncheon at Hotel Marston Monday. Walter A. Olen was the speaker and in his talk paid a very splendid tribute to the late Rueben Greb, as a Rotarian and as a citizen of this community. Mr. Olen also paid tribute to the late Charles Walter, M. L. Munert and M. B. Quail, members of the local Rotary club who have died within the past few years.

Coach Ace is preparing the high school gridirers for a game with Little Chute on the local gridiron Saturday afternoon. A preliminary game will be played between Clintonville and Shawano Freshmen teams.

Teachers of the local public schools will go to Milwaukee Wednesday afternoon to attend the annual state teachers convention held there Thursday and Friday.

Roy Barker was host to a group of friends at a Halloween party Monday evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barker. Three tables of bridge were in play. Those present were Miss Jean Stacey, Lucille Stichtman, Miss Louine Tanner, Lloyd Scheider, John Kafka, Mr. and Mrs. Matt Dahm, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Metzger, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Pinkowsky.

Concrete Supports Put Under Buildings

New London—Concrete supports are being placed under the two buildings resigned for use by girl and boy scouts of the city on the Wolf river bank. When the concrete pillars have been completed, the wood piling will be removed and the buildings will be available for use. The work is being done by the city street commission. New roofs and siding have been built to the buildings and filling is gradually being hauled in about the property. Each building is equipped with heating facilities. These are large stoves encased in jackets. As soon as the buildings are ready for use meetings of the boy scouts will be held there instead of in Legion hall. Scout leaders plan to interest the boys in a project which will include the cleaning, painting and repairing of the interiors.

Halloween Pranksters Damage Residence

New London—Police are searching for the persons who participated in the Halloween stunts perpetrated at the Emil Hamilton residence on Dickinson-st Monday night. The residence has been closed for the winter while the owner is in Europe and the Orient. Stone posts guarding the entrance were torn apart and bricks were even torn out of the walk and carried away. A stone garden bench was carried out of the lawn, and left in the roadway.

An enclosure for a baby was taken from the residence of Norman Ortleib and left in sections on the high school grounds, trailers were found all over the city, and there was the usual soaping of windows. A bench was left in the street where it was struck by a motorist and a stone was removed from near the entrance of the Smith-Meyers garage and left in a dark alleyway where it was struck by a truck.

Red Cross Seeking Workers for Sewing

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Workers are desired by the Red Cross sewing department, according to Mrs. Carrie Hooper who, with a small corps of assistants, has established quarters in the council chambers of the city hall. Every Thursday afternoon more of the material received from Red Cross headquarters is cut and distributed for finishing. A number of women have evinced an interest in the work, but more aid would be welcomed. Mrs. Hooper states. Material for shirts, sleeping garments, and children's clothes have been cut, and many women are taking these home to finish. Each finished garment is then returned for final rechecking. Material for dresses will be cut soon.

Makes Plea Not to Forget Religion

Indifference Seems to be Growing, Says the Rev. Henry Schmitt

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Speaking on "The Business of Religion," the Rev. Henry Schmitt, assistant pastor of Most Precious Blood Catholic church, was the guest speaker at the service luncheon of Lions Tuesday noon. Religion, said the speaker should be a business. It should enter into every part of an individual's life, and should not be left for an hour's contemplation on Sunday only. Religion is something from which there is no escape, since from earliest times it has been a natural thing for people to have some form of worship, the Rev. Schmitt said. When a man says that he has no religion he lies to himself, for he deepest need man turns to some inner fount of worship and has always done so, he pointed out.

The indifference toward things religious, the speaker continued, seems to be growing, since it has been found that with 287 creeds to choose from 60 per cent of the people have failed to follow themselves with any creed. The speaker said that with this indifference no country can possibly be at its best, and with less thought given to the real values of life there always will be the problems and questions which are at hand today.

The speaker advocated religious training in the schools. When parents take as much pains, he said, to give their children what they consider good education, they should consider that religion is as broadening and as inspiring to the intellect as any other form of knowledge. In this connection he said that he believed religion in some well rounded phase should become a part of every child's school life. This would complete what is now not an entirely balanced program of teaching. The child should be allowed his choice of religions, it should not be forced by school or church or parental influence, but it should be as much a part of the school course as any of the arts or professions.

Other numbers of interest on the Lions program were the solo selections by the Rev. William Mason, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, who entertained with "Heroes and Gentlemen," and "My Little Irish Girl."

ANOTHER NATURE'S CURIO SHOP

SHARKING is a profitable industry in South Africa. Every part of a shark is used for something. The fins go to make soup for well-to-do Chinese. Shoes, purses and other leather goods are made from the skin after the rough surface has been removed. Until cheap sandpaper came on the market, the rough, scaly skin of the shark was used for sanding wood. The meat is dried and packed for shipment into Africa or Malay. Shark-liver oil is widely used in the manufacture of soaps and margarine. The teeth are sent to the South Seas to be used for money.

Council Will Ask Board to Improve Road

County Trunk Q in Bad Condition, Aldermen Point Out

Kaukauna—A proposed amendment which would permit cities to state to bond their utilities was endorsed by the common council Tuesday evening. There were no dissenting votes. It was pointed out that the local utility had been working for such an amendment for the past nine years and that the local utility commission had endorsed the proposal. Alderman Jacob Lummerding asked that the Outagamie-co board be petitioned to improve County Trunk Q leading into the city. It was pointed out that the road has been in poor condition for several years and that the board's attention would have to be called to it soon if it was to be included in the 1933 improvement program. It was decided to ask the board to appropriate funds to improve the road. The city has completed some improvements on the road inside the limits and is seeking to have the work completed outside. That installation of the Tenth-st sewer project and septic tank cost $1,165.45 was revealed in a report by E. M. Charlesworth, city engineer, to the board of public works. Of the total cost there was $691.08 spent for labor and $474.37 for material. The septic tank cost $250 and 600 feet of sewer was laid. The cost per foot including the tank was $1.98 and without the tank was $1.55 per foot.

Give Chickens Excellent Care, Farmers Advised

Eggs Only Farm Product Paying Now, Says County Agent

By W. F. Winsey
Stating that eggs are now the only paying farm product, Gus Sell, county agent, is advising farm women to give their flocks the best of care to force the maximum egg production.

Eggs, the county agent said, now are bringing prices 32 per cent higher than the prices of last June. Thirty-three per cent fewer eggs are in storage at the present time than a year ago and 32 per cent less than the five year average, he said. "Thirty-five per cent less poultry is in storage than a year ago, and 27 per cent less than the five years' average. Farm flocks are about 2 per cent smaller than a year ago."

The county agent also is calling the attention of poultry raisers to the fact that feed is comparatively cheap at the present time. "During the present month, a dozen eggs at the farm are equal in value to 46 pounds of corn or 43 pounds of rye, 41 pounds of oats, 39 pounds of barley, or 27 pounds of wheat," he said.

As a simple, inexpensive, productive feed for laying hens, raised and mixed on the farm, he is recommending the following formula: 150 pounds of ground yellow corn, 100 pounds of a ground grain combination made from equal parts of wheat and barley or equal parts of wheat and oats, 25 pounds of meat scrap or tankage, and 2 pounds of salt.

With this mixture milk should be fed as a drink, 25 pounds of additional meat scrap or tankage should be added to the mash mixture. One quart of cod liver oil should be added to each 100 pounds of mash.

Another Mixture

Another mash mixture recommended by Sell consists of 100 pounds of ground corn; 100 pounds of ground oats; 100 pounds of wheat bran; 100 pounds of wheat middlings; 100 pounds of meat scrap; and 5 pounds of common salt.

For scratch feed, the county agent recommends a mixture of 200 pounds yellow corn; 200 pounds wheat; and 100 pounds heavy oats, or this mixture, 200 pounds corn, 200 pounds corn, 200 pounds wheat, and 100 pounds barley.

Scratch grain and mash should be fed in equal quantities. Hens should be provided with alfalfa meal and green stuff. Often hens so gorge themselves, however, with green stuff as cabbage that they can eat but very little mash and scratch feed.

Scratch grain may be fed in the hopper on top of the mash, in a trough. In either case the feed is cleaner than if in the litter. The Langlade and Lawe-sts. was reported to police Tuesday. The short change artists were two men driving a new model Ford. Police were unable to trace their movements.

180,000 Turkeys Raised in State

National Crop This Year Totals 18,000,000, Says Crop Service

Madison — Wisconsin's share of Uncle Sam's 188,000,000 turkey crop for 1932 is about 180,000 turkeys according to the crop reporting service of the Wisconsin and federal departments of agriculture. A total of 6,584 farms raise practically all of the badger state turkeys. About 63 per cent of Wisconsin's scratch grain can be so regulated that the flock will get enough of the mash. The only reason for grinding grain for hens is to mix the meat scrap and cod liver oil with the meal.

At this time of the year, there is no advantage in having hens running at large. The best place for the flock is in a clean, well ventilated coop.

crop will be ready for Thanksgiving this year and 30 per cent will be ready for the Christmas market.

The national turkey crop this year is one of the largest ever raised, the estimates giving an increase of 13 per cent over the 1931 total. Increases were general in nearly all regions but cold storage holdings on Oct. 1 were smaller than a year ago.

While conditions during the spring months were generally unfavorable for farm hatching and early losses were above average, the summer and fall were very favorable for raising the young turkeys.

Early in 1932, the cold storage holdings of turkeys were considerably larger than a year earlier but by October 1 the holdings had fallen below those of last year amounting to 2,591,000 pounds as compared with 3,365,000 pounds in 1931 and a five-year average of 4,703,000 pounds. An important factor in the smaller October holding this year was the marked reduction in imports of turkeys from Argentina which amounted to only 387,000 pounds in 1932 as compared with 4,823,000 pounds in 1931.

SYNOPSIS: Jervis Wear, left to drown in a tidal cave, by Robert Leonard, gains a respite from death by swimming to a ledge above high water. Leonard demands $150,000 to release Jervis. Rosamund Carew, Jervis' former fiancée, is in league with Leonard, but when Leonard tells her Jervis probably has drowned, she rushes into the cave to aid him.

Chapter 47

A GHASTLY TEA PARTY

ROSAMUND'S footsteps woke Jervis, who lay asleep in his soaked clothes on the high ledge.

He shot out a hand and caught her by the wrist as she leaned forward and called his name. He felt her stiffen and fall back. His grip tightened. She began to try to wrench herself free. He got her other wrist with his left hand and pulled her down on her knees. She kept her hold of the torch.

"What's the matter?"

"Jervis" grip relaxed. He drew his hands back through the bars and was humiliated to find that they were shaking. Rosamund flashed the light on his face and exclaimed, "Are you all right?"

"Jervis" comes well from you," said Jervis.

"What's the matter?"

"Nothing. I'm thirsty."

"Damn!" said Rosamund.

The torch swung round in an erratic circle as she jumped up. Next moment she was round the bend. He could hear her running. The dusk went black.

Robert Leonard heard sounds in the kitchen and went in to find Rosamund coming out of the pantry with a glass of water and a jug of milk in the other. She had a kettle boiling on the oil stove. She turned on him in a cold fury.

"I didn't say you were to starve him."

"Dead men don't eat."

"Don't push me too far," said Rosamund. "I got him out of the house for you, and you went back on me by hitting him over the head. I could have done him here, but you could have drugged him. But no, you must behave like a savage and risk killing him! I won't have it! And I swear to you most solemnly that if you do him any harm I'll give you away."

"Have it your own way," said Leonard.

He shrugged his shoulders and went back to the front of the house. Rosamund remained staring into the darkness. And then the black turned grey, and Rosamund came round the bend of the passage. She had a blanket over her arm, and she was carrying a tray a little in front of her, and on the tray there was a candle in a guttered candlestick, a teapot, milk and sugar, half a brown loaf, a rough chunk of butter and a couple of eggs with one chipped egg cup between them.

Rosamund set down the tray close to the bars and stuck the candle on a ledge about three feet above the floor.

"I've been as quick as I could," she said in a perfectly matter-of-fact voice. Then she pushed a cup through the bars. Jervis' hands closed on it hard, but a third of the tea jerked from the cup before he got it to his lips and drank.

"Better have an egg next," said Rosamund. "They're very soft-boiled—I knew you'd hate them raw." She was cutting and buttering a piece of brown bread. Jervis eyed the knife. It looked sharp, but he couldn't reach it.

"Why doesn't Leonard come himself?" he said.

"Conscientious objections to feeding prisoners."

"Are you really married to the swine?"

"I am. So you see I had to jilt you. Stupid affair—wasn't it?"

"What was the point of getting engaged to me?"

"I don't mind telling you the whole truth. She paused and blew out a pale cloud of smoke. "I've been married to Robert for ages. I was just before I came to Wear. The great idea was that I should do the angel niece at Uncle Ambrose, confess all, and get him to provide handsomely for us." She shrugged her shoulders. "Well, of course I was a fool. Robert came to stay, and Uncle Ambrose simply loathed him—you remember. It was just before you had that accident on Croyston rocks."

"Accident?" said Jervis.

"Wasn't it one?"

"Leonard tried to do me in."

"Who told you?" said Rosamund.

"Nan. She saw him. I didn't believe her."

"No—you wouldn't!" said Rosamund. There was a bitterness in her voice. "Well, Robert had to get out of the country. He went to South America and I didn't know whether he was dead or alive for eight years. When he wrote to me, and last year he came back."

"None of this explains why you shot at him and got out of your way to get engaged to me."

"It was Robert's idea. Uncle Ambrose and I were to marry, and Robert thought I'd settle a good bit on me if he thought I was going to marry you. Like another cup of tea? And then you'd better get those wet clothes off. I've got a blanket for you to put on."

That anger came up in Jervis again. He jerked away from her.

"Stay wet if you like! Now look here—are you going to be sensible and pay up?"

"No," said Jervis.

"Not very grateful—are you? I've really been rather nice to you—much nicer than Robert—and the least you can do is to be friendly. What's he asking you now?"

"One hundred and fifty thousand."

"Well, it'll be two hundred thousand tomorrow and two hundred and fifty thousand the day after. I'm holding Robert back, but I can't go on holding him back. We've been pretty good pals, and you shouldn't settle one hundred and fifty thousand on me? We'll go off to Peru, and you'll be rid of us. Come—is it a deal?"

"I'll see you both a good deal farther than Peru before I give you a penny!" said Jervis.

Nan, sleep, and as she slept, she dreamed as was in a dark place, weeping bitterly. Then there was light. It shone through her hands and through her closed lids, and through her tears, and she looked and saw what she had seen once before in a dream.

She saw wet stones, and Jervis lying on them, his head back, and his eyes open as if he were dead. A wave of agony broke against her heart. She cried out in her sleep and woke, shuddering from head to foot.

Nan got out of bed. She had dreamed that dream twice, and the first time Jervis had come to her. Now she must go to him. She was quite sure of this. Her fatigue was gone, and the trouble in her mind was gone.

She had gone to bed crushed down by the thought that Jervis and Rosamund were together. This had gone too far. Only knew that she had to find Jervis. She dressed herself, putting on a thin dress and a raincoat over it.

She had unlatched the window, when a sudden thought turned her back to the writing-table. She found paper and pencil and wrote, "I'm going to look for Jervis. I'm going to Leonard's house first. I am quite sure he knows where Jervis is." She folded the paper and addressed it to Ferdinand. Then she picked up an electric torch that was lying at the back of the table and went out of the long window.

The thunder set her running. It was like a door banging behind her. She ran and the wind that was blowing off the sea came up and carried her along. It was all like a dream. There was the same certainty, the same consciousness of something with which reason had nothing to do. Nan had no thought of where she was going. She had known.

She came out of the lanes and began to climb the road along the cliff, and here the storm caught her like a leaf. One veering gust flung her against the bank and held her there bruised and impotent. Spray drenched her. She fell twenty times. She was near the sheer drop over the cliff, again and yet again, and then, just as she could fight no more, the wind would lift and carry her along.

She came to Robert Leonard's front door, felt for the handle, turned it and knew at once that the door was fast.

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON

Mutiny On The Bounty

One of the world's most stirring stories of the sea is given fictional form in "Mutiny on the Bounty" by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall. This novel can easily be ranked as one of the best tales of romantic adventure to be written in recent years.

The Bounty was a British frigate sent to Tahiti in 1789 to get a cargo of breadfruit trees for transplanting in the West Indies. Its commander was one Lieutenant Bligh, an able seaman but a vicious martinet in the matter of discipline. His insane cruelty finally provoked the ship's company to an open mutiny.

Bligh and 18 others were put adrift in an open boat in mid-Pacific. The mutineers then cruised about among the islands, looking for a refuge. Most of them settled in Tahiti, where they were eventually captured and taken back to England to be hanged. A few settled on lonely Pitcairn Island, where their married island women and established a colony which exists to this day.

Bligh and his men, incidentally, traveled 4000 miles in their lifeboat to the Dutch East Indies and finally got back to England.

This novel presents the drama through the eyes of Midshipman Roger Byam, who got entangled in the mutiny against his will and who escaped hanging by the narrowest of margins. It is a remarkably well-told story that the authors have given us: a fine, sympathetic study of Tahitian life in the old days, and a revealing account of conditions in the British navy in the time of Hood and Nelson.

"Mutiny on the Bounty" is offered by Little, Brown & Co.

Appleton Shops Filled With Creations by World Famous Designers

We read with interest that Miss Crawford of Hollywood, if you please, stopped in Paris for her clothes this season to be done over in 1932 manner by Schiaparelli, or that Mrs. So-and-So, social register, has been rejuvenated by the magic dressmaker touches of famous Maggy Rouff, Paris France. Yet we fail to sigh with the right shade of profound envy nor do we wish that the Isle de France would play the Fox river to the homeward journey. That this gust of fashion called the Paris Invasion centers its flurry in New York doesn't make us bat an eyelash!

The answer lies in the fact that there is no need to sigh. Paris, New York, sartorially speaking, and all the Parisian dressmakers, whose names sound like the name of an opera diva, are right here in Appleton. The sliding shoulder line of Bruyere, the dramatic sleeve variations of Maggy Rouff, Schiaparelli's Gibson Girl treatments and unusual effects, Patou's new waistline and sleeve combinations Redfern's lampshade sleeves and all the rest of these fashionable characteristic neologies of dressmaking artists are in Appleton shops.

It's thrilling to shop along the avenue window gazing and snooping in the manner so dear to a woman's heart. The knowing woman needs no ticket to a far off continent, not when she can stay at home with the children and the mending and spend an afternoon lark in Appleton shops and see the same gorgeous styles, sometimes Paris originals and many others, beautiful and clever adaptations of their styles.

All Is Velvet

At the present moment, velvet is the sweet and snuggled child in the overflowing smart fabric family for this season. You'll find it especially alluring in many of these "don't dress for dinner" frocks to be worn after five o'clock, the kind that are so strikingly dressy. Velvet, it is said, may be successfully worn from two until two, which is another way of saying its grand for anything from an afternoon bridge to a formal dinner out at the country club.

One beauty of a velvet dress is of satin backed velvet, evening gown, with one of these new, alluring elbow length capes. Only instead of fur, the cape is edged with flustering ramboulet. To illustrate the accent on necklines this season, this particular gown is shirred in a long strip in the front part of the cape, while little velvet buttons accent the beauty of the back.

Another in the same shop is in lustrous green with a cut-away neckline that harkens back to the middle ages, a sun burst effect of silks with chiffon between, circling the neckline. This frock, called a sundown gown, also boasts puff sleeves with shirrings above the puffs.

Perhaps one of the most gorgeous evening dresses is this particular one in town of eggshell velvet with 12 inches of glittering paillette or a sequin band, edging the bottom of the full skirt. A little jacket, simple bodice and lines complete the picture of this stunning frock.

More useful, but just as flattering are the lovely velvet afternoon frocks that show shirred shoulder and sleeves, lace trims and cape collar effects. There is no question that velvet is thoroughly feminine this year with its flustering grace and unusual fashioning.

Not since the days of the original leg o' mutton has there been such an outlay of sleeves. You'll find tailored sleeves on a dropped shoulder line, the tight shirring of materials extending from shoulder to elbow ending in a slight puff, the wide sleeves that come elbow width and boast wool embroidery or even silk embroidery. In evening wear the famous lampshade or wide bell shaped sleeve extending over the shoulder a bit, the pleated, ruffled or fully sleeves are seen.

Movable Waistline
The waistline is no longer a problem, it's an art, whether in a firm nubby woolen or the slinkiness of pebble crepes. You have several places for the waistline, therefore you make your choice, midrib, natural or low. Daytime dresses have a way of making little pretense of fussiness, since colors approach the tonsil region with clever collars, scarfs and buttoned necklines. Even evening gowns sponsor well protected chests in spite of low backs.

One shop in town is launching a bright blue as its color, for which may be said that their dresses are grand. Bronze and bronzene green are two new colors that smack of holiday wear. One entrancing shade, the new orangish red, is called Good Earth.

Fur trimming still carries on, especially at the cuff line. Buttons are another important style feature for this season. Crinkly and rough crepe satins are lovely new materials in one piece a swanky satin frock is in brown and white. The full sleeves are edged with a tiny white cuff and the color, which is high, also in white. The smartness of the frock is achieved in the waistline by the way the dress fits the figure.

Jaunty, woolen suits, tailored to a "fit" femininely so, are favorites, especially for daytime ones. These suits can be worn for early shopping hours and daywear with great smartness. The flat fur is flattering for any average figure and the two piece suit of coat and skirt or one piece dress combined with a coat allows for a pleasing contrast. Two piece daytime suits are practical in that they are really two faced. That is, with all the smart dressy blouses on the market now, with the coat off one has a complete new costume.

Knitted sports clothes or outfits that simulate hand knitted effect or these durable rabbit's hair frocks are particularly grand for the working girl. Some may be very plain with only a bit of fitted pique, to contrast in color, others may depend on a tricky sleeve effect, of a clever suit on its gay plaid blouse for the smart effect for which we're all striving today. It can be readily seen that no matter what the occasion, or what the type, if it's something smart to wear, you'll find it among the clothes in Appleton shops, waiting for a looking.

JAUNTY TILT TO NEW WINTER HAT STYLES

There's an entirely new feeling in winter hats, as Jean Patou shows in these. (Left) Though there is still a flare to this jaunty cocked hat of a few months ago, it does not fit new fashions. (Center) This stitched beige illustrates the very latest hat angle. (Right) This little model shows that hats no longer perch on one ear. This taupe-beige with its brown trim, has the outline of a distinctly new movement.

Classy Raincoats Make One Long for Wet Days

Raincoats fashioned of a new material called cravanette look as if they stepped from the sport page of a popular fashion magazine. Ranging in price from $5.95 to $27.50, the coats belie their price tags for looks. One tricky one in a stripe material is jauntily lined with black and white checked flannel for warmth, with the rubberizing somewhere in the middle. Buttons, belts and sport sleeves down to the last detail give these coats a trim look. With a bright wooly scarf, a smart pair of pump rubbers and one of the new curved handle umbrellas even rainy days would be welcome. The coats are also in white, green, navy and brown, each with its individual style points.

Every Taste and Purse Suited by Variety of Lamps

So Many Attractive Patterns and Prices That Choice Is Hard

Plunge your living room into a blaze of overhead light, take away the soft glow of a bedside lamp and you'll suddenly discover the importance that lamps have in your home to make it the cozy place it is.

A tour through the town will show in short order that there are lamps and more lamps for every corner, occasion and room, with as many moods and individuality as there are pieces of furniture to go with them. In fact once you start out to choose a lamp, you'll find a dozen that you'll want to take home with you.

The use of bows on lamps shades, the many new types of shades, the sudden flux of student lamps and the use of hobnail and early American copies make lamps perhaps the most interesting sort of thing you could shop for.

The alabaster smoothness of white pottery with its gleam of light on Grecian lines, used with a beautiful transparent velvet shade is the sort of thing that places white pottery in its popularity lead. Then there's a stunning thing in another shop, a gorgeous Chinese ginger jar with its honest to goodness skin shade in off white.

There are new metal lamps that look like porcelain but cost half as much, pottery lamps, copies of Borghese lamps with soft colors of soft rose and pale green.

Early American lamps are even more enticing this fall, ranging from some of these kerosene lamp replicas to the more dainty boudoir lamps of hobnail with dimity pleated shades. One charming floor lamp in maple, on its characteristic Colonial three legs has a gleaming hobnail foot with a shade completely made of theatrical gauze. Many of the dressing table lamps have a certain quaintness about them because of their printed cloth shades of dimity. Another pair set on slender chromium, hobnail bases, has lace parchment shades with tiny rosebuds on them.

Dresden figurines standing on a gold metal base with a fluted silk shade above their heads make a charming pair of boudoir figures. This hobnail idea is carried out in floor lamps, such as a double lamp with hobnail fonts topped with charming green chintz shades.

Many of the student type of lamps have an ash tray connected to them as the lamp curves outward. For the most part these smaller table lamps are being placed on round occasional tables instead of the unusual end table.

Sofa Guaranteed to Remain Free of Moths

An English type of sofa, a coffee table and a chair present an interesting picture in one furniture store. The sofa, predominantly green, has touches of other colors in it, and flourishes ball feet of walnut. The best part of the sofa is that it is guaranteed to be moth proof for three years and has a construction guarantee behind it, which is a smart way to choose furniture as well as considering its beauty.

Dropping a red-hot clinker on the wife's new rug is almost grounds for divorce. But there's a way to do away with clinkers for good. Stott Briguets are entirely free from this nuisance, and besides, they burn more evenly and longer than other fuels. That means comfort and economy. Adv.
